Charges filed in homicide

Metro Nashville detectives charged Nicholas T. Griffin in connection with the death of Cannon County native Henry Moore.

Griffin faces criminal homicide charges for the death of Moore, who had worked in Nashville for nearly 40 years as a Yellow Cab driver.

Metro Police said additional arrests are anticipated in the case.

Griffin, 20, of Derrick Court Nashville, was developed as a possible suspect early in the investigation. Detectives located him Wednesday, Oct. 31 afternoon. During an interview, Griffin admitted to his involvement in the murder, which he said occurred during a robbery.

Moore, 69, was shot in the 1500 block of 10th Avenue North before 3 a.m. Friday, Oct. 27 after being dispatched to pick up a fare at 10th Avenue North and Garfield Street. After being shot, Moore accelerated the cab and crashed at the intersection of 10th and Garfield.

"It was his belief that a lady and her child needed to go to Vanderbilt hospital," said Yellow Cab President and General Manager Doug Trimble.

It was far out of his way, but there were no other available drivers, so he agreed to go across town to pick up the female caller who said it was an emergency.

About a block from the intersection, someone pulled out a gun. The shot shattered his driver's side window.

The cab crashed a block in front of a church, across from a school.

The investigation into this murder case remains active. Griffin is being held in lieu of $750,000 bond.

Griffin was previously arrested in April for waving a gun at a group of

The Cannon County Sheriff's Department is investigating the shooting death of Thomas Laxton in Bradyville.

"On 28 October 2012, we responded to 350 Lola Lane in Bradyville TN for a victim of a gunshot wound," said Sheriff Darrell Young.

"During the course of this investigation it was determined that a 65-year-old male, Pless Laxton had shot his son, Thomas Laxton, in an altercation. Thomas Laxton had a history of drug abuse," the sheriff said.

Keith Siskin named to judicial post

Juvenile Court Judge Donna Scott Davenport can't think of anyone better to replace Judge Don Ash than Keith Siskin.

"He listens and applies the law appropriately and fairly," said Davenport, who appointed Siskin to his current seat as Rutherford County's Juvenile Court magistrate in 2004. "He knows the law. He's the whole package."

On Monday Siskin was named by Gov. Bill Haslam to replace Ash in the 16th Judicial District Circuit Court, which serves Rutherford and Cannon counties.

"I want to thank Gov. Haslam for offering me this opportunity in the 16th Judicial District," Siskin said. "I'm honored to be able to continue serving the citizens of Rutherford and Cannon County."

The Vanderbilt graduate and University of Georgia School of Law alumnus said this appointment fulfills a life-long dream.

"This is why I went to law school," Siskin said. "You can say it's a calling."

Siskin explained he interned for a judge in high school, which inspired his love for law.

"I've wanted to be a judge ever since," he said.

Franz Walkup battles to recover from wounds

Family, community show their support

TONY STINNETT
Courier Sports Editor

Franz Walkup wanted to follow in the footsteps of his father and older brother when he joined the military.

Much like those family members before him, Walkup gave of himself to serve and defend his country. The Army fire support specialist has been transferred to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D.C., after suffering from injuries sustained during an attack in Afghanistan.

Walkup was injured during a gun battle in Afghanistan in late September. Walkup suffered gunshot wounds to the abdomen when U.S. soldiers fired upon Afghan allies who returned fire. U.S. soldiers believed they were under attack by insurgents when a mortar round hit a checkpoint set up by American soldiers. The Afghan allies returned fire and Walkup was shot five times.

Doctors originally treated Walkup, a Cannon County High School graduate, in Landstuhl, Germany. He underwent five surgeries to repair various serious injuries. He was recently transferred to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D.C., where he continues to battle on the road to recovery.

The Walkup family has endured military conflict previously. Frank Walkup III was a Marine, as was another of his sons, Frank Walkup IV. Walkup IV was killed by an explosion in Iraq in 2007. He was a commissioned officer and was a member of the ROTC program at the University of Tennessee.

The news has been better for Franz, who is rehabbing and making progress during what figures to be a long road to recovery, according to doctors.

Sister Emily Agee, a 2012 graduate of CCHS, said the prayers and support have been overwhelming.

"The amount of support and prayers and everything has been overwhelming," Agee said. "It is amazing how a community can care about a life. So many of the places have put up signs of encouragement or called us, or posted on a Facebook page in support of (Franz). The support is just amazing."

Agee said the family realizes there is a still a long road ahead and the recovery process will not be an easy one; however, she says there is progress and all the love shown Franz helps drive him.

"It's tough, especially when you have been through this before," Agee said. "We are so very lucky and fortunate. We are so relieved that (Franz) is doing better. Knowing people care and are sending prayers and support has been helpful."

Franz' twin brothers, Jake and Joshua, are eighth-graders at Woodbury Grammar School. They said just knowing their brother is Andy Bryson has been appointed by General Sessions Judge Susan Melton to serve as Cannon County's third judicial commissioner.

Bryson, former Cannon Courier publisher/owner, served as chairman of the Cannon County grand jury for decades in addition to working at the newspaper from age 9 until retirement in 2009.

Under Tennessee law, judicial commissioners are responsible for the issuance of criminal arrest warrants upon finding probable cause. During a probable cause hearing, judicial commissioners set bail and issue orders of mittimus.

Jimmy Barrett and Nile Young also serve as judicial commissioners.

A Shot Of Wry
LARRY WOODY

Don't you know mole rats need love too

A while back there was a story about a gaggle of animal activists who were up in arms over the plight of baby fur seals.

It seems that in certain remote parts of the world, indigenous people don't look at a baby fur seal and see a cute, cuddly little hug-muffin with big, soulful eyes. They see lunch.

I'm not down on baby fur seals, understand, but I find it interesting that animal activists tend to operate on some sort of cute-o-meter. The cuter the critter, the more angst from the activists.

How come, for example, they don't go equally gaga over the African mole rat?

The African mole rat could use some hugs. It is one ugly little dude.

It is born naked and hairless and stays that way through life. It has a flat nose and pink wrinkled skin. It has big curved front teeth that it uses for digging, and since it spends its life in underground burrows it has tiny, squinty eyes.

I found a photo of an African mole rat on the internet and it reminded me of the time when I was a little kid and accidentally walked into the bathroom just as my grandmother was getting out of the shower. At least granny could grab a bathrobe. The mole rat can't.

The African mole rat is hardly the Kim Kardashian of the world. It will never have its own show on Animal Planet, or a booth at the Petting Zoo.

We won't see Paris Hilton sashaying down Rodeo Drive with an African mole rat cuddled in her arms. It is not a designer-accessory critter.

But it's a fascinating little fellow, when you get past first impressions.

For example, the mole rat's society is structured along the lines of ants, termites and bees. Only one female, the queen, gets to reproduce, assisted by to one-to-three designated Richard Gere-type guy rats.

The rest of the colony functions as workers. All the workers are sterile (to make sure they don't get any big ideas when serving the queen her tea).

The larger workers serve as guard-rats and the smaller ones are assigned to gather food, maintain the nest, take out the garbage, repair the cable and so on.

Life is hardly a bowl of peaches for any African mole rat, but if you're a sterile little runt worker-rat you're REALLY at the bottom of the totem pole.

If you're the queen I suppose it's an OK life, relatively speaking. The Queen Rat gets to lie around the burrow all day nibbling on worms and grubs and occasionally going to the prom with one of the colony's lucky breeder rats.

And the soldier rats get to march off to battle now and then, gnaw up a neighbor, and hang out at the local EM Club and VFW Hall.

Meanwhile the poor little worker rat trudges through the dark tunnels, bringing the queen grub-worms, emptying the Royal Bedpan, and knowing it'll never get a kiss.

If animal activists really want to come to the aid of a down-trodden species, forget those baby fur seals and adopt African mole rats as their standard-bearer.

They won't do it, of course, because the African mole rat is - let's put it bluntly - ugly.

Even the babies are homely. A species has to be awfully ugly not to at least have cute babies. But African mole rats are born ugly and get uglier with age.

They're not at all like those darling little fur seals, bobbing on ice flows and melting the hearts of animal activists.

Don't expect any rat-love from the seal-huggers.

Local families' music tradition goes global through Mickey Harris

At age 3, he had a toy guitar.

At age 9, a real bass electric model had Mickey faithfully playing music each Thursday night for aging and ailing veterans at York VA Medical Center and the little "Leanna Opry" in the old building.

At age 10, Middle Tennessee native Mickey Harris touched musical history, to wit, by playing backup to legendary Uncle Dave Macon with deep Cannon and Rutherford county musical roots.

At age 36, the locally-grown minstrel strums and strolls all over the world with internationally acclaimed Rhonda Vincent and her Rage band.

More about that first electric bass guitar: "Grandfather Jack (the late) Tomberlain bought it for my birthday. His band needed a bass player, so that's what got me started."

More about playing for the veterans: "Because my father, Eddie (Harris), worked in healthcare at hospital, they permitted me, at under-age 9, to come into Dad's ward and make music for the veterans with my family, headed up at that time by Grandfather Tomberlain. We did that several years for the veterans."

More about making history with the late great Uncle Dave Macon: "I was age 10, when our family's band was asked to back Uncle Dave in a local performance. I sheepishly warned the legendary Uncle Dave, I didn't know any of his songs. I'll never forget his words: 'My songs are simple, you'll be OK.' With Uncle Dave's confidence, I must have done fine."

And into the new 21st Century the music plays on, as evidenced last month when he and a group of family and friend musicians picked, harmonized and honored Rutherford resident Grandmother Louise (music maker) Tomberlain at Murfreesboro's Farmer's Restaurant on her...shhh...don't share with anyone, her "80th" landmark birthday.

Rutherford/Cannon county music royalty was there, including 84-year-old legend Billy Yearwood who dates back to the 1940s picking with Mickey's extensive music-making family, that includes the Tomberlains, the Tiptons and the Leonards.

On the wall at 's WGNS Radio, hangs a historic picture of Mr. Yearwood, who can be heard each Saturday morning making music at historic Readyville Mill Restaurant.

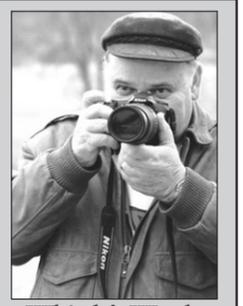

That 1947-era picture shows Mickey's (late) Uncle Carl Tipton, with (then little and young) Floyd Leonard, a present-day Murfreesboro resident, stroking the strings of a big bass fiddle, and Mr. Yearwood making his steel guitar cry out, blanketing radio land in parts of five Middle Tennessee counties.

While on tour recently in North Carolina and Arkansas with Rhonda Vincent, whom Mickey has performed with the last 11 years, Mickey described some of his music family roots,

"It's born in us...this music stuff. No reunion goes without music. It runs in the family from generation to generation," Mickey shared over a pile of hash browns and scrambled eggs at an eatery. "That was evidenced the recent night we honored Grandmother Louise with a surprise dinner and picking session."

Those invited guests grew emotional when Louise and her sister, 77-year-old Sophie Tipton, after encouragement from picking session leader Mickey, jarred down on soulful notes of an old Baptist hymnal song.

"My four-year-old son, Jackson, named for Grandfather Jack Tomberlain, walked up that night we honored Grandmother Louise, and asked fiddle player Tom Brantley (of Wartrace) if he'd teach him how to play the fiddle," Mickey shared. " Jackson is already interested in music.

Whittle's Words

The family's generational music tradition looks safe going into the future.

"Daughter Mikayla (age 6) already loves to sing and loves music, so yes, the generational thing looks promising," Poppa Mickey noted proudly.

Mickey recalls his boyhood days of music, dating back to the regionally-famous "Carl Tipton Show" that aired multiple decades on area radio and TV stations.

"Even when I had a toy guitar, sometimes they'd have us youngsters come out on stage, to maybe help introduce a special guest, or to pretend we were making music along with the adult musicians," Mickey continued.

"Grandmother Louise and Aunt Sophie were lead singers with Uncle Carl in that era and we played a lot at the old Leanna Opry on Saturday nights."

Today, Mickey is recognized in the industry as accomplished on multiple instruments, including the Dobro, mandolin, banjo, guitar and bass.

He describes area music heritage.

"Rutherford and Cannon counties are rich in talent, have greatly impacted the and world music scene, starting of course, with first super star, Uncle Dave Macon," Mickey strummed back in time. "Uncle Dave put Murfreesboro and Cannon County on the map."

"I recall Billy Yearwood going back to the 1940s, with him appearing with legends such as (the late) Kitty Wells and her husband in 1946," Mickey added. "Mr. Yearwood later played with us, when I was a boy, at York VA Medical Center. And today, at age 84, Mr. Yearwood and his music plays on. We have a great music tradition here."

Don't reduce the distance requirement on beer sales for country markets

I want to start by saying that I truly support small country stores. With that being said I also want to say in response to last week's article, where they mentioned changing the zoning requirement to 800 feet from a church so they can sell beer, I am against.

This law was put into place to protect the values that this country was built upon. Furthermore, if we allow the government to change this law what will be next? Will it be how close a child sex offender can live to a playground or a school? It is time to say enough is enough. Some things are not meant to be changed and this my friends is one of them.

Each participant should bring their own box, laundry basket, or container to put the food in. There are no prequalifications. Everyone is welcome. This will be a "drive thru" distribution.

Cars should line up on High Street coming up the hill from College Street. Each car will be directed through the parking lot of First Methodist and out through the First Baptist Church parking lot. For more information, contact the church office at 563-2135.

PETTUS READ, Guest Columnist

Murfreesboro is still behind the times

I consider myself as one who enjoys talking about the old days, but really appreciates my modern conveniences.

I've lived without running water, indoor plumbing, air conditioning, heat in every room and other things we take for granted these days. I've done it and would not enjoy going back. I would miss my Facebook, 125-plus channel TV, central heat and air, computers, microwave and other things that I enjoy on a regular basis. But, even with all of these wonderful modern day inventions, I'm still one of those who lives in an area of this great state that is behind the times.

I really didn't know it until the other day when I opened my mailbox and had a letter from the county's area cable company telling me about how my cable subscription was outdated and I needed to upgrade to their new super system. It had all kinds of movies, public service channels, viewing on demand and internet service so fast that it would go to a website almost as fast as you could think of it. Plus, they would lower my monthly charges for the first six months so that it would only cost me pennies a day to upgrade.

It sounded like a great offer and I looked at the envelope one more time to see if it was really mailed to me, and sure enough, it was. There was one problem though. I don't have cable and cable has never been made available to anyone who lives on our county road.

I would like to have fast Internet, but unless the cable company knows something I don't know, I think all I'm going to receive is the envelope currently lying on my kitchen table.

You see, our farm is located only fifteen miles from Murfreesboro, which just happens to be one of the fastest growing areas in this state, and for awhile, this nation. I moved back to the family farm in 1998, and as soon as we made the move, asked for cable to be placed on the farm. Knowing that the service was only one half mile from our house, I assumed that it easily would be made available. However, that was not the case.

After my first call and two weeks of waiting for a survey to be made checking out the possibilities of getting the service, I received a call telling me they had good news. The cable company told me that they could hook me up for only a mere $8,000. In fact, it would cost some bit more than that, but after that quote, it was not going to happen anyway. I, instead, put up an antenna, forgot about Internet and lived as I had before leaving the farm some 25 years earlier.

Waiting another 6 years, I tried again. Once again, the cable company, who had gotten the other company's contract from the county since the last time I tried to go global, gave me the same story. Trying not to be out-done, I put in satellite for the TV and contacted my phone company to get Internet. Yet again, I found out how communication-illiterate my farm was. There was no DSL line near my house, so I had to settle for dial-up. And by the way, they thanked me for upgrading my phone service and being a faithful customer.

What they didn't know, but should have, was that I was becoming a disgruntled rural customer like many folks in the rural parts of this state. Today, I still have satellite TV to watch my westerns on and my Internet is accomplished by a cell phone hot spot.

Rural Tennessee has made large improvements in affordable broadband coverage, but it needs more! Why is it so important to rural Tennessee? The Tennessee Broadband Task Force several years ago answered that question. They said, "Broadband expansion is to the 21st century what rural electrification was to the 20th century. High-speed Internet access is critically important to Tennessee's future, especially in jobs, education and healthcare."

Rural electrification changed rural Tennessee from kerosene lamps to electric lights and generated billions of dollars to our state's economy. Just like affordable electricity helped rural Tennessee, the current efforts to bring affordable broadband into the outer areas of our counties has placed at the fingertips of rural Tennesseans a much needed economic impact, along with jobs that have helped during difficult times over the last few years. But, more must be done.

Today, Connected Tennessee, which is an independent non-profit organization, is the only group that monitors rural areas of this state connected by broadband. They give out information about coverage areas, organizing communities and educating policymakers. We need more involvement by local citizens, civic groups and other Tennesseans to bring our rural areas up to speed like our urban locations.

To see how your county or location ranks, take the time to sign in with Connected Tennessee, on whatever speed Internet system you have, at www.connectedtn.org or give them a call at 615-242-9508.

Broadband is needed now in rural Tennessee! Let's not leave rural Tennessee behind.

Studio Tour to include painting in addition to artwork

There's something new going on at the Studio Tour this year! Scheduled the weekend before Thanksgiving Friday-Sunday, November 16-18, 2012, it promises something special for everyone. With 39 artists located across eight studio sites tour-goers will have three days to take in a variety of finely-crafted artwork from ceramics, jewelry, and wood design to this year's newest media addition: painting. Other opportunities for the touring public include the addition of three new studios: Eva Berg's Everich Farm in Christiana, Bill and Judy Heim's Red Oak Pottery in Lascassas, and Elizabeth Bray Jewelry on Main Street in Murfreesboro.

As newly participating studios the three are excited to join and share the Studio Tour's tradition for celebrating the craftsmanship of the working artisan through demonstrations offered to the community at each location. When asked, Elizabeth Bray commented, "I hope to teach a little about metalworking techniques ... and to share with the community my passion for the processes involving fire, metal, design, and the creation of wearable art." Demonstrations will be ongoing at each site offering residents the chance to visit the workspaces, observe the involved processes, ask the artists questions, and to acquire keepsakes and gifts available for purchase.

"Along with the new studios adding two-dimensional media artists such as painters and photographers seemed like a natural progression for us this year, stated Eric Snyder," chair of the Tour's organizing committee with the Stones River Crafts Association. "We are always looking for ways to keep the Studio Tour's rich tradition of fine crafts as our focus while also exploring the community's interest in artistic variety as offered through the many ways art is constructed today," Snyder concluded. Look for painters Susan Truex and Mary Miller Veazie to join jeweler Dolores Weaver at Studio S Pottery, painter Mark Jackson at Red Oak Pottery, and photographer Tamarin Salazar at Popcorn Studio Pottery.

The Studio Tour and all demonstrations are open and free to the public. The hours are Friday & Saturday 9 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sunday 12 p.m.-5 p.m. For more information visit: www.ArtStudioTour.org or call 615-542-6368.

WIC kiosks increase convenience

Good nutrition for pregnant women, infants and children ages five and under just got easier for residents of Cannon County. The Cannon County Health Department is now offering online education for clients of the Women, Infants and Children, or WIC, program.

"Nutrition education for some WIC participants can now be done at home or wherever you can use a computer," said Barbara Prater, nursing supervisor for Cannon County Health Department. "If WIC clients do not have a computer, a WIC kiosk is available at the Cannon County Health Department."

Eligible WIC clients can use the health department computer on the kiosk and follow the easy instructions to complete a ten minute module on nutrition. When the module is complete, clients receive a certificate and the office assistant will print their WIC vouchers.

Online WIC education can also be done outside the health department. Eligible clients who are currently enrolled in the WIC program and are not considered high risk or receiving therapeutic formulas can go to <http://health.state.tn.us/wic/edu/> to access online education. If a printer is not available, the client can write down the name of the completed session, their certificate number, the date and the time the session was finished and bring that information to the health department on their next WIC visit.

"Our goal is to make it easy for pregnant women, infants and young children to receive nutritious food and reliable nutrition information," Prater said. "Good nutrition during pregnancy helps reduce infant mortality and good nutrition from infancy through the preschool years helps children get started on healthy habits for life."

Eight WIC educational modules are currently available online and additional modules will be developed.

To qualify for WIC, a family of four can make up to $42,643 annually. For more information on WIC, including income guidelines and eligibility requirements, contact the Cannon County Health Department at 563-4243.

JUDGE---

Judgeship was in 2004 when Davenport appointed him as a Juvenile Court magistrate, where he presided over both civil and criminal cases including parentage, child support, child custody and visitation, dependency, neglect, abuse and delinquency matters.

Siskin was mostly assigned temporary cases - like motions and preliminary hearings - in juvenile court, because any of his decisions could be appealed to her as the supervising judge, Davenport said.

But may attorneys would request Siskin to get a faster hearing and not appeal to Davenport.

"A lot of attorneys would waive the appeal, because he knew the law," she said.

Davenport appointed Siskin to the magistrate seat because she had seen him in action over the years in juvenile court, representing everything from children with delinquent acts to child neglect to child support cases, she said.

"That's how I knew his capabilities and intelligence - from practicing in front of me," she said.

Haslam must have seen his capabilities to appoint him to the 16th district bench, which has seen some high profile cases recently. The most recent and high profile was the case of Shanterria Madden, who was sentenced in July to 29 years in prison for the murder of Lady Raider basketball player Tina Stewart.

Ash, who has served the 16th Judicial District Court since 1994, stepped down to be a senior judge for the State of Tennessee. These are appointed by the Tennessee Supreme Court and may be assigned on a temporary basis to hear cases in any state court. With the addition of Ash, there will be four senior judges statewide.

"The opportunity to try all types of cases across Tennessee, as well as sitting on various appellate courts, will certainly be a challenge but I am truly excited about this new phase of my judicial career," Ash said upon announcing his promotion in July.

In addition to his regular docket, Ash was the presiding judge of the 16th Judicial District Drug Court and DUI Court.

In addition to his time on the bench in Rutherford County, Ash also authored "A Bridge over Troubled Water: Changing the Custody Law in Tennessee," which became the basis for changes to domestic relations laws in Tennessee. He also co-authored "Children of Divorce: A Practical Guide for Parents, Therapists, Attorneys, and Judges" with William Bernet.

"I have all the respect and admiration for Judge Ash. I have real big shoes to fill. But I'll do my best to follow in his footsteps," Siskin said.

While Ash presided over a variety of case, it's unclear whether Siskin will hear civil or criminal cases, because case assignments are at the discretion of Judge Mark Rogers. But regardless of the type, Siskin feels ready for whatever cases that come before him.

"Either way I can draw from my experience in juvenile court," he said, explaining that much of the state law and case law is similar, whether it be a divorce case or a criminal case.

"It's going to be a challenge, but I'm ready to get to work," Siskin said.

living and improving gives them strength and courage.

"We've gone through something like this before, and I can imagine losing another brother," Jake said. "It's tough but it is getting better and that is encouraging. We are so blessed to have people in the community who care so much."

A Facebook page, "Staying Strong for Franz," has been started to offer support and monitor Franz's progress. An account also has been set up at First National Bank to assist the family with expenses. Donations may be made to Team Franz at First National Bank in Woodbury, Murfreesboro and Manchester.

Coats for Cannon giveaway scheduled

The Woodbury Lions Club community project, "Coats for Cannon," will be distributing free coats to the public from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 10.

"We have had around 300 coats donated and we've been cleaning them and getting them all ready for the distribution," said Lions Club member Sue Patrick.

"We hope to have a great turnout," Patrick said, adding that a number of churches and other organizations have pitched in to make sure the community's needs are being met.

Coats for most sizes and age groups will be available, she said. "We were short on children's coats so we have purchased new ones to donate."

All anyone has to do is show proof they are a Cannon County resident. A driver's license, utility bill, bank statement, voter registration card, etcetera, can be used for proof.

Need more information? Call Sue Patrick at 563-1328 or 464-5336.

Farm Service Agency announces crop year 2011 sure program signup

Farm Service Agency Administrator Juan Garcia announced today the sign-up period for the 2011 crop year Supplemental Revenue Assistance Payments (SURE) program opened October 22, 2012. The SURE program is part of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (Farm Bill). Under the 2008 Farm Bill, SURE authorizes assistance to farmers and ranchers who suffered crop losses caused by natural disasters occurring through Sept. 30, 2011.

Donny Green, County Executive Director of the DeKalb/Cannon County Farm Service Agency says he wants producers to be aware of this signup so they are certain to visit their FSA county office to file a crop year 2011 SURE program payment application no later than June 7, 2013.

Since DeKalb/Cannon Counties received a disaster designation in 2011, producers who obtained an insurance policy or plan of insurance for ALL 2011 crops (except grazing crops), or meet waiver provisions as socially disadvantaged, limited resource, or beginning farmers AND suffered at least a 10% production loss, due to a natural disaster, to at least one crop may be eligible if all other payment conditions are met. Producers considered socially disadvantaged, a beginning farmer or rancher, or a limited resource farmer may be eligible for SURE without a policy or plan of insurance or NAP coverage.

SURE payments are calculated based on 60% of the difference between the SURE Disaster Program Guarantee and the Total Farm Revenue. A limit of $100,000 applies to the combination of payments from SURE and the livestock disaster programs.

Producers who do not file a 2011 SURE program payment application by June 7, 2013 will not be considered eligible for 2011 SURE program payments.

For more information about this program, contact the DeKalb/Cannon County FSA office at 615-597-8225 or visit the Farm Service Agency's website at <http://www.fsa.usda.gov/sure>.

911 Board oks new high school connection

Cannon County's 911 Board of Directors voted unanimously Oct. 25 to purchase equipment allowing the county's center to connect to a new, statewide network.

The proposal was presented to the board by 911 Director Roy Sullivan. Called Next Generation 911, the system will be a digital-based platform over fiber optic lines with an emphasis on cell phones. Currently, 911 uses traditional, expensive copper trunk lines.

"The exciting part for me in being involved with this upgrade in equipment is bringing Cannon County 911 technology up to the same standards as every other 911 district in the state of Tennessee, instead of just trying to catch up to other 911 districts," Sullivan said.

The change will shorten the time it takes to receive and disseminate life-saving information to emergency responders that serve Cannon County, he said. "NG911 will enable the transfer of call information including the caller's location," Sullivan said.

Currently, a wireless caller's location is calculated by either X and Y coordinates or GPS. If the call hits a neighboring county's cell tower, the 911 service does not receive the caller's information, making it necessary to verbally relay the location. That takes up precious time, he said.

With NG911 a statewide GIS database will be maintained making any map information in Tennessee available. AT&T is also currently testing the ability to text 911. If implemented, Tennessee will be one of the few states in the nation capable of texting an emergency message.

The NG911 project is being funded by the Tennessee Emergency Communications Board through wireless surcharges.

Cannon County's board voted to purchase the NG911 equipment to replace the old analog equipment currently used locally. This will incorporate a new computer assisted dispatch system in addition to updating just about all the equipment in the 911 center.

"The project is being rolled out in several phases. The first phase has already been completed with the installation of computer modem interfaces to connect to the NG911 statewide network," Sullivan said.

"The next phase is the completion of converting all our GIS map data to a statewide compatible format called TIPS. That should be completed by the end of this calendar year," he said.

Cross country Top 20 at state

NASHVILLE - Cannon County's boys cross-country team finished 16th at the TSSAA Class A/AA State Championships here Saturday.

Freshman Elva Magana competed individually in the girls state championship. She finished 54th out of 183 competitors.

More important than their respective finishes is the fact Cannon County was there amongst the best in the state. It marked the second straight year Cannon County had a female competitor in the Class A/AA girls state meet. Hannah Faulkner, who battled injury all season, made the field as a freshman in 2011.

All Cannon County runners who participate in the cross-country program deserve a tremendous congratulations. They are driven competitors who have demonstrated an ability to put team before self.

Much respect goes to the entire boys team. The unit, as a whole, did not have the breakout season it hoped for in 2011. Many times the girls team contended for, or won, meet titles.

Individuals had their moments for the boys but it was clear more would have to be invested if the team would succeed as a whole. During the offseason numbers increased, commitment appeared to be more important and training became basically a daily routine.

Results were evident this year. They invested in the program and realized great returns. Cannon County's boys reached the state tournament in year two. What an accomplishment!!! Having an individual or two would have been equally impressive but getting the entire team to the state tournament is an entirely different story.

For starters, not too many male teams have reached the state tournament at Cannon County. The 1985 boys basketball team is one of the last to do it so cross-country is in elite company at CCHS.

Having the team advance also demonstrates quality depth within the program. One or two outstanding runners can advance because of God-given individual talent and work ethic. A team doesn't advance with players working together and for one another. That is why my respect is so very high for Jordan Turney, Marshall McReynolds, Jake Burdick, Clay Luker, T.J. Paul, Will Bailey and Devin Burgess - as far as the seven who were able to represent CCHS at the state level. There were more guys. The ones who pushed their teammates and were just as determined and committed; however, only seven get to participate at the state level.

Cannon County finished 16th out of the 24 teams there. Quite an achievement for a team that didn't have a program less than 20 months ago.

Marshall McReynolds led the team, finishing 41st overall with a time of 18:49.97 on the 5K course. That's 41st out of 189 competitors. Pretty strong considering McReynolds missed two-thirds of the season with chin splint injuries.

Turney was 71st with a 19:23, followed by Burdick (76, 19:29.54), Luker (124, 20:53), Paul (125, 20:54), Bailey (177, 23:15) and Burgess (179, 23:15).

They will always be the first boys cross-country team from CCHS to reach state.

The girls were just one spot from advancing as a team as well. It marks the second straight year the ladies have come within one spot of advancing.

Next year will be another great one for the boys and girls cross country programs at CCHS.

The young men and women who participate will make sure of it.

Injury puts game in perspective

It's difficult for Grace Christian Academy Coach Randy McKamey to remember a time when football was not a key part of his life. He grew up in the shadows of Tennessee's Neyland Stadium, playing for his hometown Clinton High School, then furthered his education and playing career while proudly wearing the Orange and White uniform of the Tennessee Vols. He was truly living a dream that literally thousands of young men share on Friday nights in the fall.

For nearly 20 years now, he's coached the sport that has meant so much to him. The last six years, he's been the head coach at Knoxville Grace, watching his son Will, a potential Mr. Football candidate, mature into one of the top players in the state. Just days earlier, the talented athlete received a scholarship offer to play for the Naval Academy. It was an incredibly proud moment for everyone in the McKamey family.

But a couple of Friday nights ago, the game that has meant so much to the McKameys nearly took Will's life. In the regular season finale at South Pittsburg, young McKamey suffered a serious brain injury and was airlifted to Erlanger Hospital in Chattanooga.

One moment, everything was fine. Young McKamey had just scored a touchdown and the ensuing two-point conversion. But after trotting off the field, he collapsed into the arms of Grace's athletic director on the sideline.

"I had no idea that Will was hurt," recanted the coach a few days after the incident. Seconds later, McKamey's wife Kara was tugging at her husband's arm, letting him know their son "was in trouble". Unconscious and flirting with death, young McKamey had suffered a serious brain bleed.

"As we raced down I-24 towards Chattanooga to meet our son at the hospital, I prayed like I'd never prayed before," said Coach McKamey. "It was then that the reality of it all finally set in, that I might not see my son alive again," he said.

Will's condition was touch and go for a while. Brain scans were initially made every four hours and literally thousands of prayers were lifted up on his behalf as word about the seriousness of his injury spread like wildfire across the state.

But almost miraculously, young McKamey's condition began to drastically improve. Doctors at Erlanger were baffled. What they were seeing on the brain scans did not match the condition and actions of their patient. By Monday afternoon, less than 72 hours after his body was flown from South Pittsburg to Erlanger, doctors announced he could go home on Tuesday.

Young McKamey, an honor student, will likely be back in the classroom on a limited basis this week. Whether or not he'll be back on the field in uniform is still up in the air. Doctors are projecting, however, that he should make a full recovery, enough to honor his scholarship offer at Navy.

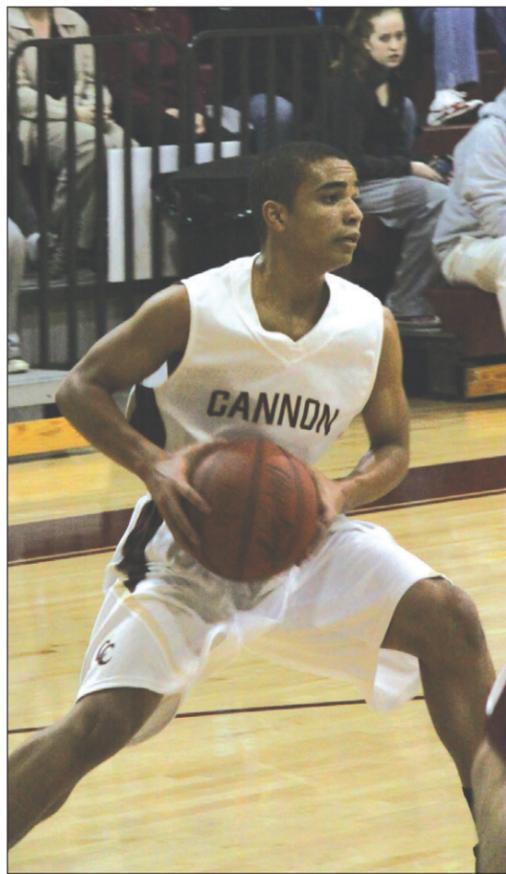

But for now, those closest to the McKamey family are just thankful for answered prayers and miracles. And that's the way it should be.

Blue Raiders bowl eligible

MTSU Sports Report

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. - Late game heroics on special teams and defense spurred Middle Tennessee to a 34-29 win over its archrival Western Kentucky. The winning effort also helped MT reach bowl eligibility status at Houchens-Smith Stadium.

MT (6-3, 4-1) moved into second place in the Sun Belt as the Raiders came out victorious in a game that saw three ties and remained close until the very end. WKU (6-3, 3-2) fought back three times, but never held a lead during the contest.

Redshirt sophomore Reggie Whatley found the gamewinner for Middle Tennessee with his 96-yard touchdown return at the six minute mark in the fourth quarter. Whatley broke through to give the Blue Raiders a 34-27 advantage.

The Blue Raiders, who had 342 yards total offense, became bowl eligible for the third time in four seasons. It also marked the earliest time since 2001 that MT had reached the six win plateau.

HONORING OUR VETERANS

LOUIE HILLIS Korean Prisoner of War

"It was a nightmare, nothing but a nightmare" Louie Hillis, POW

Louie Hillis is this year's Marshal for the Annual Veterans Day activities at the Cannon County High School as well as the Veterans Day parade being held on Saturday the 13th of November. Hillis will be representing the Prisoners of War (POW).

The Korean War broke out on June 25, 1950. However there were no military bodies in Korea at that time, only advisors. Louis and many others were put on transport ships headed to Korea.

"We were on a Japanese Hospital Ship being transported to Korea when we were torpedoed; it felt like the ship came out of the water when the torpedo exploded. I remember the alerts going off, by this time I thought I was in the Navy, because of all the ships I had been on and now we were being torpedoed. We looked out to sea and saw two destroyers coming to us, it was then we saw that they were Australian destroyers coming towards us dropping depth charges where they thought the submarine was.

The Australians hit the sub and Hillis and the others continued their crossing to Korea. When Louie and his battalion landed they went by foot to different bamboo villages, in all they traveled about 30 miles. He said they rested for the night all the while he said they could see flashes in the north. The next morning they left at 0830. Companies L and K were together heading into the pass.

Louie explained that the Pass was actually a horse shoe road, twisting and winding up and over a mountain. He said they came upon a dead North Korean officer. They continued forward towards the Pass when they came upon this long valley with rice patties on each side of them. Louie says that this is when the sound of rifle and machine gun fire began filling the air. Everyone scattered and tried to take cover. "I had a Lieutenant beside me and he had nothing but a pistol on him and he took my rifle and started up the hill.

The lieutenant told me there was a sniper around; he started up the hill when I saw him get shot dead on by the sniper, he had on the web type gallowses on his back and I saw them pooch out; he slid down the hill to me and started shaking his head and climbed back up the hill. I followed him, but I never got to see where he went because they grabbed me and started loading me down with 60 millimeter mortars because I didn't have a rifle on me. I climbed the hill to where they had the mortar launcher set up and we started sending those mortars, but I never could find where they hit." Louie recalls. After a fierce battle where the US took a beating a lot of the soldiers were separated from the others. It was at this time that Louis was captured.

The Koreans took Louie and the rest and marched them into Hadong village, he said it looked flattened and it was burning. "There was a place that looked like a church or a school to the left near the trees and when we got there it was packed full of GIs', so they took us across the yard and put us in a chicken hut (Louie and three more). Louie said when you are penned up like that and because of nothing to tell time he couldn't give us the specifics on some things that happened but he said it wasn't too much later that one of our aircraft came and dropped a napalm bomb onto that hut.

He said they had no radio communication with anyone. "Our boys didn't know we were behind the enemy lines, I found out later that 18 of the GIs' died in that building. I know because four of us could walk and we had to bury those GIs'. We did get their dog tags though and we gave them to Lieutenant Reid. The bomb went in the front and came out the back. I did hear that about 8 were taken from there up north on a death march and then to the Sunchon Tunnel."

"Around the end of September they rounded us all up and started us on our death march, we were headed towards a village called Namwan about 35 miles towards Seoul from our position. We knew what it was; we knew we all wouldn't make it. While walking if someone fell to the side of the path because they were not strong enough to go on, they would shoot them where they lay" Louie says. They traveled by night and slept during the day, if they could sleep. He said that the enemy would come around and throw lit cigarettes on them and wake them up and ask "why you come Korea?" Then they would tell them, when they got to Seoul they could have beef steak and bread, they knew to say bread and beef steak in English taunting us Louie said. One man was so dehydrated Louie said that he just gave up and fell to the side. "We wanted him to live and so Sgt. Winters and I put one arm over our shoulders and helped him make it to the

Louis and the other ones were repatriated at the end of September. Out of the 108 men in K Company (Louis's company) only 9 of them made it back. Louie and the other POWs were sent back home via different hospitals, he had lost 63 pounds from July 27th to the end of September.

They are listed as the very first POWs of the Korean War. He and the others were assigned to Fort Benning in the training division for new recruits until their time was up in the service. Louie left the Army with Purple Heart, The National Defense Medal, the POW Medal, Korean Service Award, the United Nations Combat Award, The Korean Presidential Medal and Commendation.

Louis and his wife Mary Nelle live in the Elkins community and are active in many military organizations. Louis asks that all come and support the veterans on this day that is set aside solely for them.

TOM NICHOLS Grand Marshal for the 2012 Veterans Day Parade

By Colonel Jim Stone

Thomas (Tom) Nichols, known as Brother Tom, twenty years ago had a vision. He wanted to do something to preserve the history and proud heritage of Cannon County. He wanted to honor the Veterans of Cannon County. Tom called me when we were living in Murfreesboro, and asked if I would come and meet with several men in the community to discuss what we could do to honor our Veterans.

I remember I asked what they did at the present time to honor our Veterans. He said several good citizens got together on Veterans Day at the Courthouse, at 1100 o'clock, the eleventh hour, the 11th day, the 11th month to read the names on the monument in front of the Courthouse. There were 59 names on that monument at that time. We discovered that one name had been left off and we fixed that. When Iraq came about we added another name, Frank B. Walkup, IV. We met at the Dillon Street Missionary Baptist Church. There were eight men present, Tom Nichols, Marvin Jennings, Aubry Nichols, A.W. Potter, Albert Thomas, Luther Mooneyham, Floyd Bogle, and myself.

The first year was a blessing, it was snowing and sleeting, as we tried to have our program on the steps of the Courthouse. It was so bad we had to move to the Cannon County High School Cafeteria. This was a blessing in disguise. God knew that we needed to be at the High School making our presentation to our children, so that they never forget the sacrifices and horrors of war. We declared the first year a success and vowed to continue and make the program and parade bigger and better each year. Now 20 years later we have done that. We have a great all day program at the High School and a tremendous parade to honor our Veterans.

Of the original 8 members that started this wonderful adventure, only two are left, Tom Nichols and myself.

I am proud to be a part of a good thing for our community. And what I like most of this adventure is that it was started by a Non-Veteran, Tom Nichols, who had a dream and a vision, and we lived that dream and vision. We now have an organization, "The Veterans and Concerned Citizens for the Veterans of Cannon County. We have a Veterans Service Officer, Penny Daniels, who works diligently to help the Veterans of Cannon County. And in my 35 years of military service Penny is by far the best Veterans Service Officer I have ever known. And, as Brother Tom said, "Just look at all of the fun we have had over these 20 years". We also have a newly chartered American Legion Post 279 in Woodbury, with the distinct honor on having Bobby E. Ferrell, the Commander of our Post 279, which is only two years old, to be selected as the "Legionnaire of the year for the State of Tennessee, which has 189 Posts, and 30,000 Legionnaires, in the State. Thomas Earl (Tom) Nichols born February 18, 1932, on Doolittle in a small two room house across from the Doolittle Cave. The Nation was just coming out of the Great Depression. His father was William Richmond Nichols and his mother was Lucille Davenport Nichols. He had one sister, Nancy Ann, who passed away at age 3. He has two brothers W.R and Roy Nichols. Tom loved working on the farm. He started plowing in the fields on the Dillon Farm, which is where the hospital and all of the others businesses are located now. Tom said he loved working with his Dad. He said each of them had a team of mules. It was a lot of hard work and he loved every minute of it. When he was eleven years old, the U.S. Army conducted maneuvers on the Dillon Farm. It was a very exciting time for Tom. He said that his Mama would cook and give the soldiers hot food. The soldiers had a guard post in their yard, around the clock, so Tom got real close to the soldiers. Most of them were from New York, New Jersey, and California. The soldiers were here several days during the winter. They were with the 100th Infantry Division.

Tom said that it was a sad day when the soldiers left for war. He said he remembered crying when saying good bye to them. They had become like his brothers.

Later on Tom was drafted for the Korean War, but was turned down due to health problems. He was so disappointed and sad. He found out that instead of going in the infantry he could sign up for another branch of service. He chose the Marines, but was again disappointed because he did not pass his physical examination, and a lot of his friends left for war. Tom said that he had a lot of friends who were in World War II and never returned home.

Tom married Ruth Harmon in 1952. They were married for 53 wonderful years. Ruth passed away on November 5, 2005. They had a blessed life together. They had one daughter, Ruth Ann (Dennis) Watts and two grandchildren, Lee Ann and Daniel (Amber) and one great grandson, Levi, son of Daniel and Amber, who is already in Heaven.

Tom had many jobs working first at the shirt factory, then he went to Nashville and trained in concrete work. When things got slow he came back and worked in the box factory. Later on he went back to the concrete work and stayed with it for 33 years. Tom and his crew built many of the interstate bridges, some on the four lane highway to Woodbury. During all of these years he also preached at the Millersburg Baptist Church and the Dillon Street Baptist Church. He had a radio broadcast, "Forward in Faith", for many years. He retired in March 1994 and began bee keeping. He said he did not know which is harder, bridge building or bee keeping. He enjoyed them both. Tom said that with God's help he was able to accomplish all of these things and he always put God first.

It is a great honor to have Tom Nichols as the Grand Marshal for our 2012 Veterans Day Parade. Tom did not serve in the military, because of medical problems, but Brother Tom served this County and the Veterans of Cannon County for twenty years. The citizens and veterans of Cannon County owe a great deal of gratitude to Tom Nichols. Because of Brother Tom's dream and vision the Veterans of Cannon County and American Legion Post 279 have put Woodbury and Cannon County on the map. God bless Brother Tom and the original eight men for their service to Cannon County, God bless our Veterans, and God bless this great county.

MARY NELLE HILLIS Concerned Citizen for the year 2012

This years' Concerned Citizen is Mary Nelle Ruhl Hillis.

Mary Nelle is 83 years old and admitted that she has volunteered most of her life. She is a retired federal employee with 30 years having worked at the Pentagon and at the Birmingham Ordinance Center in Alabama.

Mary Nelle, as she is known around here, used to roll bandages during WWII, and did many things to help the war effort and her country and she has worked at the auxiliary at the Stones River Hospital as long as her health was good. Mary Nelle has endured much during her long life; her father and family worked in the coal mines of northern Alabama. She married in 1947 to Paul Elkins. She met him in Alabama but he was born and raised in Woodbury Tennessee. Mary Nelle had to promise to move back to Tennessee after he retired. She had to "agree to that before he would go through with the marriage," said Mary Nelle as she laughed remembering the conversation. Paul was the uncle of Jerry Elkins who owns E&E Wholesale.

Several years later Mary Nelle married Max Ruhl, a retired Colonel of the US Army. They were married for seven years before he died.

In 2005 Mary Nelle wed Louie Hillis from Warren County, Tennessee. Louie is once again the Marshal representing the Prisoners of War (POW) this year. Louie is also 83 and Mary Nelle says she is through marrying any other person so Louie better stick around a while more. Mary Nelle Hillis has always supported the military men and women of this country. She asks that everyone come to the High School Gym on the 9th of November and show your support for the men and women who fight for our way of life. You can see Mary Nelle and all the Marshals in the Parade on Saturday the 10th of November, starting at 1:00 p.m.

MR. AND MRS. PATRICK GERDES

Miss Taylor Garchie, Patrick Gerdes wed October 27

On a sunny but cool, winter's day in southern Wisconsin, Patrick Gerdes and Taylor Garchie exchanged vows in an intimate ceremony before family and friends. It took place in a field in Woodford Park amongst the trees, beside a creek and an enormous green hillside covered with "Happy Cows."

The double-ring ceremony took place on October 27th, 2012, with Jackie Schweitzer (Aunt of the groom) officiating. While both bride and groom wrote personal vows for each other, Steven Yoho, the bride's childhood friend, served as her attendant and Josh Euler was Patrick's best man. Indy Garchie, brother of the bride was the ring bearer and Sonny Flannery, the flower girl.

After the ceremony, everyone enjoyed dinner and celebrated with those who traveled far to get here for this most joyful occasion. Many relatives came from Tennessee, Illinois, Michigan, Virginia and Wisconsin.

Taylor is the daughter of Liz Garchie of Monroe, WI and Michael Garchie of Orangeville, IL and sister to Indy Garchie also of Monroe. She is the granddaughter of Donna and Ronald Fiorini of Lake Geneva, WI.

Patrick is the son of Randy and Terry Gerdes of Woodbury, TN and brother to Matthew and Lauren Gerdes of Auburntown, TN and his sister Kaitlynn Gerdes of Woodbury, TN. He is the grandson of Marian and Bob Ross of Woodbury, TN and Mary and Larry Gerdes of Hillsboro, TN.

Patrick is employed at Monroe Truck Equipment

Adams Memorial Library News

Adams Memorial Library is open regular hours! To find the entrance right now, follow the signs and take the sidewalk between the library and the Adams House Bed and Breakfast to the meeting room entrance on the lower level.

We have a small collection of books available, but we are glad to request other materials from the Auburntown Branch Library and have them delivered here for you to use. We are still offering photocopy and fax services as usual and there are 6 public use Internet computers available as well.

Both the libraries in the Cannon County System will be closed in celebration of Veteran's Day on November 12th. Thanks to all who have served in the past and are serving now.

Many of you have asked when we plan to move back into the main part of the library. We expect this to happen around the first of the year. We do know that it will take longer to unpack the collections than it did to pack them. We have well over 1000 boxes in storage at this time.

MR. AND MRS. SHANE HOLLANDSWORTH

Miss Jessica Leonard becomes the bride of Shane Hollandsworth

Jessica Leonard and Shane Hollandsworth exchanged vows before family and friends in an outdoor ceremony in a freshly mowed hayfield located on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Fletcher in Auburntown.

The double-ring ceremony took place on October 13th, 2012 at 5:00 p.m. as the sun began to set, with Charlie Bowman officiating.

The event was a picture of fall elegance featuring the colors burnt orange, fern green, chocolate brown and ivory.

The bride and flower girls arrived in style in a classic 1956 Ford owned and driven by Mr. Tim Blanton. Her attendants arrived in a 1964 Ford Falcon owned and driven by Mr. Roger Turney.

Ms. Majesta Morris served as her friend's maid of honor with Rachel Van Nathan and Emily Sissom serving as bridesmaids.

Lance McAllister and Chris Mullen were their friend's best men with Jarred Asbury, Justin Asbury and Daniel Jones serving as groomsmen.

Ushers for the evening were Carter Rogers and Evan King. Ava Reese Vance and Alayna Ryder Vance, nieces of the groom, served as flower girls. Jordan Leonard, sister of the bride, attended the guest registry.

After the ceremony, guests dined on southern fried chicken with all the fixins provided by Sandi McDaniel and Simply Delicious Catering of Auburntown.

As darkness fell, guests enjoyed an elaborate fireworks display courtesy of the best men, groomsmen and ushers and left with s'mores wedding favors.

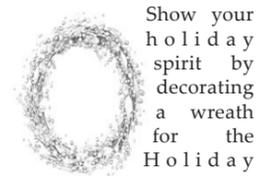

Jessica is the daughter of Sandra Leonard of Woodbury and David and Connie Leonard of Auburntown. She is the granddaughter of Jim and Peggy Holden of Woodbury and Howard and Fay Leonard of Christiana.

Shane is the son of Stan and Sandy Hollandsworth of Woodbury. His grandparents are Bobby and Dean Fletcher of Auburntown and Dean Hollandsworth of Woodbury and the late Milligan Hollandsworth.

Book Review

BY: ELRENA PARTON

Pirates Go To School by Corinne Demas and Illustrated by John Manders (Orchard Books) $16.99, Fiction/Humorous, 3-8 ages, hard cover, 40 pages.

The story, Pirates Go to School by John Manders, encourages and shows everyone wants to learn even if you are a Pirate. The Pirates smell in the story, but the author's children characters put up with the smell. Show-and-tell time at school is interesting, because the Pirates bring items from their ship. Pirates eat different foods from the other children. Nap time is different for the pirates. Pirates Go to School teaches children to accept people as they are. All the pirates love going to school and learning. They especially love the teacher reading to them at story time. The cover is illustrated with children and pirate characters. All are smiling and having fun.

Scholastic and Elrena Parton have donated a copy of Pirates Go to School to the Cannon County Library System.

Blood drive to honor Branden Schwartz

The American Red Cross is holding a blood drive in honor of local resident Branden Schwartz on November 15. The drive will be held at the Lion's Club Building at 540 West Adams St. in Woodbury, TN from 12:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m.

In November, 2011 Branden was diagnosed with a type of childhood brain cancer called medulloblastoma.

For the past year, Branden has endured chemotherapy, radiation and other cancer fighting treatments at Monroe Carell Jr. Children's Hospital at Vanderbilt in Nashville. During his battle, Branden has needed dozens of blood and platelet donations.

His mother, Angela Schwartz says it's easy to forget the importance of donating blood until the need hits home. "I've always felt it's important to donate blood, but I never fully understood just how much people actually need," said Schwartz. "There are so many children who rely on those donations to survive. It's overwhelming."

That is why the American Red Cross is asking all eligible blood donors in the Woodbury Community and surrounding areas to roll up their sleeves in honor of Branden on November 15.

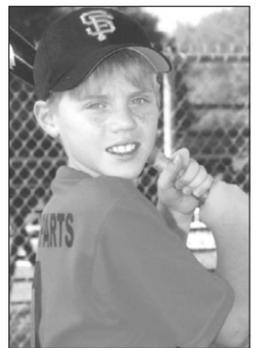

"It's very touching to know the Red Cross is holding a blood drive in Branden's honor," said Schwartz. "It is very important to us to raise awareness about the importance of giving blood."

Donating blood isn't the only way you can help the community at this special blood drive. Blood drive organizers are asking the community to bring in pull tabs from aluminum cans and plastic bottle caps. The tabs and caps will be collected and taken to a recycling center. The money raised from those items will go to families staying at the Ronald McDonald House near Monroe Carell Jr. Children's Hospital at Vanderbilt and the American Cancer Foundation.

To schedule an appointment for this blood drive or any other American Red Cross blood drive, visit redcrossblood.org/make-donation and enter the sponsor code: Lions Club

In addition, you can always call 1-800-RED-CROSS. Most healthy individuals who are at least 17 years of age (16 with parental consent) and weigh a minimum of 110 pounds are eligible to donate blood. Individuals 18 years of age or younger must also meet specific height and weight requirements.

The Tennessee Valley Blood Region serves about 60 hospitals and must have 600 people donate blood or platelets each weekday to meet the needs of hospital patients.

Woodbury Lions Club is hosting an American Red Cross Blood Drive

in honor of local warrior Branden Schwartz

Thursday, November 15

from noon until 6 p.m.

Start saving your tabs and caps Bring them in on the day of the Blood Drive.

The aluminum tabs will go to the Ronald McDonald House at Vanderbilt Children's Hospital and the plastic bottle caps will go for cancer research.

FEATURES FROM THE BIBLE

TRUTH IN SCRIPTURE

Ahaziah King of Israel
I Kings 22; II Kings 1; II Chronicles 20

Ahaziah became king of Israel when Ahab died. Jehoshaphat was king of Judah. Ahaziah did evil in the eyes of the LORD. He walked in the ways of his father and mother and in the ways of Jeroboam. He served and worshiped Baal and provoked the LORD to anger, just as his father had done.

Ahaziah fell through the lattice of his upper room and being injured sent messengers to ask the Baal god if he would recover. The angel of the LORD sent Elijah to ask the messengers if it was because there is no God in Israel that he was consulting Baal-Zebub, the god of Ekron. Elijah then sent word to Ahaziah that he would die without leaving his sickbed. The messengers reported what Elijah had said. When they described Elijah, the king knew that it was Elijah. He sent fifty men to invite Elijah to come to him. Elijah called fire down on them. The king sent fifty more and again Elijah called fire to consume them. The king sent a third group to Elijah. The captain pleaded for his life and the lives of his men. The angel of the LORD directed Elijah to go down with him and not to be afraid of him. Elijah went down with him to the king. He asked him if it was because there was no God in Israel for him to consult that he had sent messengers to consult Baal-Zebub. He told him that because he had done this he would never leave the bed he was lying on and would certainly die. Ahaziah died according to the word of the LORD that Elijah had spoken.

Make food safety first during and after the hunt this fall

In Tennessee, hunting is a viable sport shared among generations as a family activity. This fall, many Tennessee hunters will make the trek to their favorite spot in hopes of bagging the best wildlife of their choosing. Bragging rights isn't the only thing hunters are looking for though, supplying food for their family is one reason hunters engage in this pastime. Making jerky is another activity that some hunting enthusiasts enjoy. After the hunt, it is important to remember food safety techniques for you and your family.

According to the National Center for Home Food Preservation, jerky is a lightweight, dried meat product that is a handy food for backpackers, campers and outdoor sports enthusiasts. It requires no refrigeration. Jerky can be made from almost any lean meat, including beef, pork, venison or smoked turkey breast. (Raw poultry is generally not recommended for use in making jerky because of the texture and flavor of the finished product.)

Raw meats can be contaminated with microorganisms that cause disease. These harmful bacteria can easily multiply of moist, high protein foods like meat and poultry and can cause illness if the products are not handled correctly. If pork or wild game is used to make jerky, the meat should be treated to kill the Trichinella parasite before it is sliced and marinated. This parasite causes the disease, trichinosis. To treat the meat, freeze a portion that is 6 inches or less thick at 5°F or below for at least 20 days. Freezing will not eliminate bacteria from the meat.

General Tips For Safe Food Handling

The following general tips for safe handling are based on USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline recommendations.

* Always wash hands thoroughly with soap and running water for at least 20 seconds before and after handling raw meats.

* Use clean equipment and utensils.

* Keep meat and poultry refrigerated at 40°F or below. Use ground beef and poultry within 2 days, red meats within 3 to 5 days or freeze for later use.

* Thaw frozen meat in the refrigerator, not on the kitchen counter.

* Marinate meat in the refrigerator. Do not save and re-use marinade.

When preparing jerky from wild game, it is important to remember that the wound location and skill of the hunter can affect the safety or the meat. If the animal is wounded in such a way that the contents of its gut come in contact with the meat or the hunter's hands while dressing the meat, fecal bacteria can contaminate the meat. It is best to avoid making jerky from this meat and use it only in ways that it will be thoroughly cooked.

Deer carcasses should be rapidly chilled to avoid bacterial growth. The risk of foodborne illness from home-dried jerky can be decreased by allowing the internal temperature of the meat to reach 160°F, but in such a way as to prevent case hardening. Two methods can be used: heating meat strips in marinade before drying or heating the dried jerky strips in an oven after the drying process is completed. Directions for both methods will be presented here. When the strips are heated in a marinade before drying, drying times will be reduced. Color and texture will differ from traditional jerky.

Preparing the Meat

Partially freeze meat to make slicing easier. The thickness of the meat strips will make a difference in the safety of the methods recommended in this article. Slice meat no thicker than ¼-inch. Trim and discard all fat from meat because it becomes rancid quickly. If a chewy jerky is desired, slice with the grain. Slice across the grain if a tenderer, brittle jerky is preferred. A tenderizer can be used according to package directions, if desired. The meat can be marinated for flavor and tenderness. Marinade recipes may include oil, salt, spices and acid ingredients such as vinegar, lemon juice, teriyaki, or soy sauce or wine.

Jerky Marinade*

¼ cup soy sauce
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon each of pepper and garlic powder
½ teaspoon onion powder
1 teaspoon hickory smoke-flavored salt

* (for 1½ to 2 pounds of lean meat (beef, pork or venison))

Combine all ingredients. Place strips of meat in a shallow pan and cover with marinade. Cover and refrigerate 1 to 2 hours or overnight. Products marinated for several hours may be more salty than some people prefer. If you choose to heat the meat prior to drying to decrease the risk of foodborne illness, do so at the end of the marinating time. To heat, bring the strips and marinade to a boil and boil 5 minutes before draining and drying. If strips are more than ¼ inch thick, the length of time may need to be increased. If possible, check the temperature of several strips with a metal stem-type thermometer to determine that 160°F has been reached.

When preparing jerky from wild game, it is important to remember that the wound location and skill of the hunter can affect the safety or the meat. If the animal is wounded in such a way that the contents of its gut come in contact with the meat or the hunter's hands while dressing the meat, fecal bacteria can contaminate the meat. It is

Drying the Meat

Remove meat strips from the marinade and drain on clean, absorbent towels. Arrange strips on dehydrator trays or cake racks placed on baking sheets for oven drying.

Place the slices close together, but not touching or overlapping.

Place the racks in a dehydrator or oven preheated to 140°F Dry until a test piece cracks but does not break when it is bent (10 to 24 hours for samples not heated in marinade). Samples heated in marinade will dry faster.

Begin checking samples after 3 hours. Once drying is completed, pat off any beads of oil with clean, absorbent towels and cool. Remove strips from the racks. Cool. Package in glass jars or heavy plastic food storage bags.

If the strips were not heated in marinade prior to drying, they can be heated in an oven after drying as an added safety measure. Place strips on a baking sheet, close together, but not touching or overlapping. For strips originally cut ¼ inch thick or less, heat 10 minutes in an oven preheated to 275°F. (Thicker strips may require longer heating to reach 160°F.)

Making Jerky From Ground Meat

Jerky can be made from ground meat using special presses to form or shape the product. Disease-causing microorganisms are more difficult to eliminate in ground meat than in whole meat strips. If ground meat is used, follow the general tips for safe handling tips listed previously. Be sure to follow the dehydrator manufacturer's directions carefully when heating the product at the end of drying time. Again, an internal temperature of 160°F is necessary to eliminate disease-causing bacteria such as E. coli O157:H7, if present.

Storing the Jerky

Properly dried jerky will keep at room temperature 2 weeks in a sealed container. For best results, to increase shelf life and maintain best flavor and quality, refrigerate or freeze jerky.

TEASERS & TRIVIA

Ask Ken Beck

Mrs. Lincoln (Sally Field) downsizes in L.A.

Dear Ken: What has Sally Field done lately?

Double Oscar-winner ("Norma Rae," "Places in the Heart") Field, who turns 66 on Nov. 6, co-stars as Mary Todd Lincoln in Steven Spielberg's new film "Lincoln," which opens within two weeks. (Daniel Day-Lewis portrays Lincoln.) Field played Aunt May earlier this year in "The Amazing Spider-Man" and was the voice of Marina Del Rey in 2008's "The Little Mermaid: Ariel's Beginning." She co-starred in the 2006-2011 TV series "Brothers & Sisters" as Nora Walker. This summer Field bought a new house for $2.3 million in the Los Angeles suburb of Pacific Palisades after selling her 6,000-square-foot pad in Malibu. I reckon she may still be unpacking.

Dear Ken: Our family was sad to hear of the death of crooner Andy Williams? What years did his TV show run?

Williams, who died Sept. 25 of bladder cancer at age 84 in Branson, Mo., sang and laughed his way into the homes of America from 1962 to 1967 and from 1969 to 1971 on NBC with his "Andy Williams Show." And he kept coming back for decades with his trademark sweaters in those annual Christmas specials. His giant holiday hit, "It's the Most Wonderful Time of the Year," was written by Edward Pola and George Wyle for his TV show in 1963. "The show I always enjoyed doing above all others was the Christmas show, and it was the one that the audiences loved the most, too," Williams noted in his 2009 autobiography, "Moon River and Me." "It always had the highest ratings of the entire season. To this day people stop me on the street and tell me how much they cherished the Christmas shows and how much it meant to their whole family." The singer recorded five holiday albums: "The Andy Williams Christmas Album," "Merry Christmas," "I Still Believe in Santa Claus," "Christmas Present" and "We Need a Little Christmas."

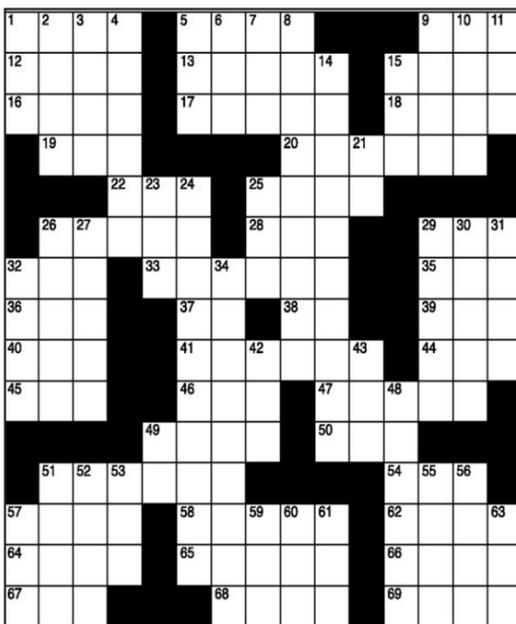

Dear Ken: What can you tell me about the girl who plays Destiny in the movie "Butter"?

That is Yara Shahidi, 12, who was born in Minneapolis, Minn., to an Iranian father and an African-American mother. After moving to California, she worked in a bunch of commercials and then made her film debut opposite Eddie Murphy in 2009's "Imagine That." Her other films include "Salt," "Unthinkable" and "Rip City," and she has appeared in the TV shows "In the Motherhood," "Cold Case," "Wizards of Waverly Place" and "Lie to Me."

Dear Ken: What movies did Dean Jones make for Disney Studios?

Jones, 81, a native of Decatur, Ala., starred in "That Darn Cat!" "Monkeys, Go Home," "The Ugly Dachshund," "The Love Bug," "Snowball Express," "The $1,000,000 Duck," "Blackbeard's Ghost," "The Horse in the Gray Flannel Suit," "The Shaggy D.A." and "Herbie Goes to Monte Carlo. He also worked in several Disney remakes: "The Computer Wore Tennis Shoes," "That Darn Cat" and the TV movie "The Love Bug."
