Regret follows shooting

MIKE WEST Courier Editor

Rick Smotherman's anger has turned to sadness in the wake of Thursday's (Nov. 8) shooting on the Square in Woodbury.

Smotherman was lucky, he says, but his 13-year-old attacker is less fortunate. The boy faces years in lock-up.

The eighth-grade child attempted to rob Smotherman's store right at closing time.

"I never dreamed that would happen, but you just never know," said Smotherman from behind the counter at Leland's Furniture and Home Décor.

At that point, the store owner still thought the pistol was a toy cap gun.

Liquor vote big surprise

TONY STINNETT Courier Sports Editor

You will soon be able to buy liquor in retail package stores in Woodbury.

Citizens voted to permit the sale of liquor in retail package stores in Woodbury during the 2012 General Election by a slim 80-vote margin Tuesday. The referendum passed 407-327.

Voters were not as favorable when it came to increasing their taxes as the sales tax referendum failed by an overwhelming 68 percent of the vote. Of the 4,560 votes cast, 3,122 were against.

Woodbury incumbent Mayor Harold Patrick ran unopposed and collected 99 percent of the 628 votes cast. There were four votes for write-in candidates. All incumbents also claimed the six available seats for alderman. "I am appreciative of everyone who voted for me in this election," Patrick said. "We are making progress in Woodbury and we want to continue that over the next four years. I take my responsibility to all of the citizens seriously and will work to do a good job for Woodbury during (this) term." Charlie Harrell received 510 votes and will serve as vice-mayor. Also returning are Dotty Duggin (500), Lois Larimer (450), Adam Melton (443), Faye Knox (474) and JoAnn Davis (401). All five current aldermen were sitting board members and won re-election. would like to "I congratulate Mayor Patrick and all my fellow aldermen," Harrell said. Coach wins stipend for his efforts

Cannon County crosscountry coach Marc Larson will be getting paid for the outstanding job he has done with the program in just its second year of existence.

The Cannon County Board of Education unanimously voted to pay Larson a stipend of $1,500 for his role as boys and girls cross-country coach during its regular monthly meeting at Woodbury Grammar School Thursday (Nov. 8).

Prior to this vote the crosscountry coach did not receive a supplement; however, the board agreed to take the stipend set aside for a second assistant football coach that was not used in 2012 and use it for the cross-country coach. Board member Blackburn made the motion for the stipend to be used to pay Larson for his services as cross-country coach this year and then to revisit the issue to add the supplement in next year's budget. The assistant football coach stipend will only be used for cross-country this year. "As long as this does not take away from the other staff I see no reason not to award this stipend to (Larson) for the work he has done with the cross-country program," Daniel said. "I just want to make sure we are not saying we are taking this stipend from another sport."

Surprise vote gets city scrambling

MIKE WEST Courier Editor

Passage of the liquor referendum in Tuesday's (Nov. 6) election caught Woodbury officials off guard.

Now they are scrambling to get caught up with the provisions governing package liquor sales in Tennessee.

"This is uncharted water for us," said Mayor Harold Patrick. "I have contacted MTAS to forward a list of things to do."

MTAS is short for Municipal Technical Advisory Service, an agency of The University of Tennessee Institute for Public Service, MTAS provides technical assistance to cities and towns across the state.

"I do know there are several things we have to do and now that it's passed we will pursue them," Patrick said.

The liquor referendum passed 407 to 327 in Woodbury only. A similar county-wide sales tax referendum failed 3,122 to 1,438.

In Tennessee, package stores are governed by the policies of the Tennessee Alcoholic Beverage Commission, which requires applicants to go through a lengthy licensing process. In addition to a $850 annual fee and a $300 application fee, retail liquor store owners must fill out several forms and questionnaires in addition to obtaining a state charter and providing a list of officers/owners of the corporation all before earning a permit.

There will be a significant time period before Woodbury's first liquor store will open.

"I wouldn't think it would be overnight," said Ginna Winfree, staff attorney for the Tennessee Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

In fact, the process cannot begin under after See SURPRISE, page 7

Lions help 'Sandy' victims

In recent weeks as Superstorm Sandy was near landfall on the East Coast, we let you know that Lions would be there for those in the storm's path. We know the devastating impact that a disaster can have in a community and as always, our thoughts and prayers are with those who were affected, including members of our own Lions family. As Lions, we have once again demonstrated our quick response in the time of need, and we want to update you on relief efforts.

Lions Clubs International Foundation (LCIF) awarded a US$100,000 Major Catastrophe Grant with money from the disaster relief fund, allowing Lions in affected areas to immediately begin providing assistance. Many Lions are already working with local food banks, police and fire departments and other local organizations.

In addition to the Major Catastrophe Grant, LCIF has awarded US$100,000 in emergency grants to Lions districts in North Carolina, Maryland, New Jersey, Connecticut and New York. LCIF was able to award these funds from the disaster relief fund, thanks to Lions who generously donated knowing that in times of disaster there is an urgent and great need.

Follow our efforts online through the LCI blog, Twitter and Facebook. LCIF is expecting and is ready for many more emergency grant requests as Lions assess the needs of their communities and power is restored. We also {welcome} Lions to consider making a donation to the Foundation for disaster relief. Donations to the disaster relief fund are Melvin Jones Fellowship eligible.

We believe that "In A World of Service," one person can make a difference, but together we can have an even greater impact.

Browns Mill Dam to be removed

The Tennessee Healthy Watershed Initiative announced its plans to fund nine new watershed improvement and protection projects including one on Stones River.

Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency was awarded $35,000 for the removal of the Brown's Mill lowhead dam on the East Fork of the Stones River.

More than $750,000 in funding will support several strategic investment areas of the Tennessee Healthy Watershed Initiative, and the projects will be implemented across the state beginning January 2013 through June 2014.

"Today's announcement reflects the initiative's approach to ensure that Tennessee's bountiful streams and rivers are managed to conserve the native species, natural plant communities, and ecosystems found in and along river systems while continuing to meet the increasing needs of our communities," said Gina Hancock, state director for The Nature Conservancy in Tennessee.

Today's projects also join a second effort in Lebanon, Tenn., at the James E. Ward Agriculture Center and Fairgrounds, including implementation of a pervious parking area, rain gardens, wetlands, and other techniques to capture and clean stormwater on site before it enters Tennessee's waters. This site will also be available as an educational facility for Tennessee citizens interested in learning about the benefits of these techniques and how to implement similar efforts in their own communities. A ribbon-cutting ceremony is planned at this particular site December 18, 2012, with details to be announced at a later date.

The Tennessee Watershed Healthy Initiative has completed a three-year operational plan, which includes providing flexible funding for innovative projects across the state; planning for secure funding for the Initiative into the future; promoting and communication, collaboration, and thoughtful water resources planning among a broad partnership of agencies and stakeholders.

Newspaperman's 'Pivotal Points' of early life in the Bootheel

Aug. 22, 1944, was an ultimate pivotal point of life.

That's when country doctor Sam Sarno and nurse Kate McBain walked a mile on railroad tracks to be up out of flood waters and mud to help Momma Whittle deliver her third child.

Nurse Kate bragged for years that she was first to whack Little Danny Whittle's fanny Farm neighbor Poppy Gowen was one of those first sweet souls of life who radiated goodness.

Was it fate the morning as I leaned down to kiss Poppy on his forehead, muttering the words: "Poppy, I love you very much." I learned later in life that tears came to Poppy's eyes as me and my farm dog left to go back home.

Poppy died later that day of a stroke. That morning was the only time I leaned over and kissed Poppy on his forehead.

Fast forward to Oct. 25, 1950, the date Daddy Whittle was in a serious car wreck while driving from our rural farm to nearby Sikeston, Mo., the largest city of about 5,000 in our rural Southeast Missouri region.

Daddy died of head injuries, and that was the night older brother Van had his first running nightmare. Brother had nightmares the rest of his life.

Second grade at little rural Canalou School of advanced thinking and higher ciphering was my first education that all adults don't take a liking to all children. It was the first time I walked into a room, and instantly the teacher did not like Little Danny Whittle and I didn't like her in return.

I got a school record seven whippings in second grade, three of which came one day after I vigorously took up for one of my little girlfriends for writing me a note: "Little Danny, I like you. Do you like me?"

I count what followed as the beginning of my professional writing career. While teacher wasn't looking, after administering a wide leather strap across my shoulders, I penned a note of my own, and left it on her desk.

A few moments later, I heard teacher roar at the front of the classroom. She'd found the note: "Dear Mrs. Cox, I hate your guts very much." Not being a bright child, I signed the note "Little Danny Whittle.'

teachers to be found, not the least of whom was Robert L. Rasche, superintendent of Gray's Ridge High School.

After Canalou had lost its school due to consolidation in 1959, I transferred in 10th grade to Gray's Ridge, now called Richland High School in the 'Bootheel' farming region of Southeast Missouri. If not for Mr. Rasche, I'd not have finished high school.

Perhaps the biggest pivotal point of early life came the day I heard about a fantastic janitor's job coming open at the newspaper in Sikeston.

Understand, I'd never stepped foot in a real newspaper office. When I got there to inquire about the janitor's job, the regular covey of front-office secretaries were out to lunch

But I heard movement in a side office. And when I knocked on that door, a little grey-headed man invited me in, asking why I wanted to see him.

"I'm here for that job," I advised.

As I was being seated, the man, I learned later to be the publisher, asked if I could type. I recall wondering: "Man that must be a pretty classy janitor's job, having to know how to use a typewriter??...'

After being seated, the publisher asked the question that marked the destiny of my career. He had a funny way of phrasing his sentences.

"Sonny, how long it is that you've been wanting to write sports?" Publisher C.L. Blanton Jr. asked.

I think I swallowed once, blinked twice before lying like a dog: "Sir, I've been wanting to write sports all my life."

He hired me on the spot, and I never confided I was there to apply for the janitor's job

Publisher Blanton later advised he hired me because of my audacity and voracity.

That pivotal point in life opened the door to a writing career that has taken me around the globe multiple times, and I've been paid to go.

(NOTE: The "D" in Dr. D's is for Detroit, since Doug was born and raised in Detroit .)

"So, I-all excited-got ready, and dad and I drove over to Tiger Stadium and parked in a parking lot behind Hoot Robinson's, a popular bar located right at Tiger Stadium. As dad and I walked from the car toward the stadium, we stopped at this street vendor, located at the corner of Michigan Avenue and Trumbull Street, and dad bought me a bag of roasted peanuts . Man, I still remember how good those peanuts smelled and tasted! Every time dad and I went to a game, he always bought me a bag of those roasted peanuts.

"Once we walked inside the stadium, there was this great combination of hotdog smell, cigarette smell, cigar smell, beer smell, all kinds of other smells, nicely topped off by the warm summer weather and excitement in the air, resultant of anticipation to hear the first crack-of-the-bat, It was like a total ambience that just can't be described to someone who never has attended a major league baseball game . . . you have to experience it in the flesh!

The Tigers were playing the Minnesota Twins. The Twins had a superstar in first baseman Harmon Killebrew, a powerful

It was a once-in-a-lifetime experience to see him do that.

"But back to the point I want to make: Remember, this was the summer of 1966, and dad had purchased our tickets for $1.25 apiece. That's right, my dad and I paid a whopping two dollars and fifty cents to watch the game.

"Even though our $1.25 tickets were for seats way up in the bleachers, there weren't all that many people in attendance that night, which left a bunch of empty seats. Dad and I were able to watch the game from a couple high-dollar seats right behind home plate.

'Though I attended hundreds of Tigers' games over the years, there was something extra special about that one particular day the summer of '66. It's sorta like everything was perfect. I suppose it boils down to the fact that I was totally happy to be at the game, and dad was totally happy because I was totally happy. I didn't think of it like that as a 9-year-old boy, but I do now.

"In addition to other moments, I'll always treasure that special day, and, too, I'll always appreciate my dad for it.

"I hope every father and son can experience a day as grand as the one dad and I experienced the summer of '66."

ads, slogans, banners, posters and other election paraphernalia. But in two years it will be time for another round of Congressional elections and all that entails.

But you know what, maybe all of the time and money spent on election posturing isn't so bad, especially compared with restrictions in place in China in the face of this week's upcoming party congress.

Here are some of the restrictions the government has put in place to prevent any unauthorized political messages from getting to the public:

Taxi drivers have been ordered to remove rear window handles so passengers can't roll down the windows and throw out illegal messages.

Taxi drivers have also been told to be especially vigilant and watch for passengers who might throw ping pong balls carrying reactionary messages from cabs

Television stations have been told not containing the words "die" or

"down" because the words are considered inauspicious.

Pigeon owners have been told to keep their birds, well, cooped up, I guess so they don't drop subversive messages.

Sales of pencil sharpeners have been curtailed, presumably to keep dissidents from sharpening pencils they need to write reactionary messages.

The government routinely blocks internet sites that contain words the leaders find offensive or subversive. But now they are also blocking mention of the 18th Party Congress itself. Of course, party officials have also announced the Internet will soon undergo "routine maintenance" to make sure the Congress can carry out its business.

So let's think about this for a moment: an overabundance of attack and negative political ads, or restrictions on sales of pencil sharpeners. I think I'll take the ads

IDB says either pay or get out

By BOB STOETZEL

On Thursday, November 8th the Industrial Development Board (IDB) met at the courtroom of the Courthouse. In a move consistent with the way the IDB has been operating since being placed on the board, they have put muscle to their negotiating.

After dealing all summer long with a company that is occupying one of the buildings that the IDB is in control of, the Board has given the county attorney Mike Corley instructions to convey to the company, operating under the name of THC Select, they will either comply with the terms of the lease or they "can get out". You might think that is harsh words for a county whose willingness to bend over backwards to keep any industrial business here in Cannon County would do. Well first you need the background to this story.

What if this company has been doing business in this county since February 2011 and has never paid rent to the county? They have not paid for the electricity that they have used or even water. This company has not paid any personal property taxes since being here according to Donald Preston. There is no one legally able to excuse those taxes. This company, after being addressed by the IDB, finally put the electricity in their name after two years. This is the problem that the IDB has been incurring all summer long.

All of these members of the IDB are newcomers with the exception of Randall Reid. These include Randall Reid, Dean More, Cory Davenport, David Vance, Mindy Gunter, Neal Doug Appelbaum and Bodary. All are professional people. All are dedicated to using the money earned by renting these buildings that the county owns to the advantage of Cannon County in a business-like way.

THC Select took this building two years ago and agreed on the rent which is $5,500.00 a month. The trouble is they never had a viable written lease with the IDB or the County; this was reported to the new IDB that it was a gentleman's agreement between THC and Mike Gannon and the old IDB. Trouble with that is by the law of the state of Tennessee there can be no deal without a signed written lease. The IDB did their homework and found that the company actually owed the IDB $175,000.00 according to Randall Reid. However THC says they don't owe any of that because they had an agreement with the County Executive and the IDB.

This is where the story starts to unravel. This is not the only company that has been doing business with the county that hasn't lived up to their oral lease. PC Disposal just recently rejected an updated lease (written) and moved to Warren County. Their rent was supposed to be $1,500.00 a month. They have been paying $500.00 a month and they have operated in Cannon for four years. But the last four months they had not even paid the $500.00. The IDB made up a new written lease with them and the back pay and the company would not have anything to do with the lease and paid four months back pay ($2,000.00) and left Cannon County lock stock and barrel.

That only leaves THC Select to deal with. The IDB gave them a lease to consider and the company replied with one of its own. Chairman Reid called it "criminal" even to ask something like their lease. Reid said even if they would agree to it they (the IDB) would be guilty of criminal offenses. At the meeting on Thursday, after attorneys for both entities talked it out, the Board have sent a message through Attorney Mike Corley. "Sign the lease or get out" was the comment by member Dean More. Members were heard saying that they were tired of trying to do business with a company that didn't want to do serious negotiations while trying to drag this out until they could find a new building to occupy. If THC doesn't reply soon or by the next meeting of the IDB, the Board will start proceedings to oust them with a detainer warrant.

Under State Law if a committee finds that there are suspicious events and numbers not matching and they believe fraud could be going on, it is their duty to turn their findings over to the Comptroller of the State of Tennessee, which they have decided to do just that.

PETTUS READ, Guest Columnist

As the dust slowly settles from this country's most expensive elections ever, many are still attempting to analyze the results and just what the future may hold. The day after the election, I was impressed with the comments on Facebook from my "friends" and how they did and did not agree with all the many results of those who won, as well as those who were defeated.

I don't believe I've seen the use of as many Bible verses to reference an event like I did that day in all of the time I've been on Facebook. Must say it was pretty reassuring, along with refreshing. He does work in strange ways.

It does look like the voters have put the ball over in the 113th Congress' court and I just hope there is some coming together with all parties involved on a lot of issues that affect this country. Maybe the 112th Congress, before it leaves, can also move on the farm bill before the end of the year that it delayed until after the election, and help our farmers plan for the spring. The farm bill will help maintain that safety net for our farmers, as well as provide the security for this country's food supply. Since the elections are now over and I have mentioned "food supply," it is also time to start planning for the next major event that involves large numbers of people gathering, counts being aken and vernment have been our national emblem instead of the eagle if Benjamin Franklin had been allowed to make the selection. He wrote to his daughter after seeing the emblem eagle and remarked about the turkey, "For the truth the turkey is in comparison a much more respectable bird, and withal a true original native of America... He is besides, though a little vain and silly, a Bird of Courage, and would not hesitate to attack a Grenadier of the British Guards who should presume to invade his farm yard with a red coat on."

Turkeys have been a favorite of Americans since the very first Thanksgiving. It continues to be the "meat of the day" for this very special occasion.

In fact, Butterball reports many turkey preparers are so proud of their culinary bird they even take a photo to cherish the memory. Photos of Thanksgiving turkeys (the cooked ones, not your Uncle George who shows up every year in a green leisure suit) may be more common than you think. A survey on the Butterball Turkey Talk Line website a few years back shows that 34 percent of all respondents take a photo of their Thanksgiving turkey. And to think, all these years I spent my time making pictures of family members sitting around a table full of food with their eyes shut.

today than it was a year ago. A 16-pound turkey in the 2011 survey had a price of $21.57 compared to this year's price of $22.23, which is a 66 cent increase. Farm Bureau reports that the small price increase for turkey can be attributed to increased consumer demand.

Other meats that shoppers buy have been relatively more expensive over the last quarter of the year or so and that has translated into higher demand for turkey.

The survey found that the average cost of this year's feast for 10 is $49.48, which includes turkey, bread dressing, cranberries, pumpkin pie and all the trimmings. Last year the same menu had a cost of $49.20, making you only pay 28 cents more for this year's dinner with Uncle George. Of course, he is worth the extra expense.

Also in the survey it showed in addition to the turkey, dinner rolls and a combined group of miscellaneous items used to make the meal (onions, eggs, sugar, flour, evaporated milk and butter) also increased slightly in price. Items that showed a price decrease from last year were whipping cream, cubed bread stuffing, sweet potatoes, a gallon of whole milk, fresh cranberries, green peas, pumpkin pie mix and pie shells.

was wounded until I reached down there and brought up a bloody hand," Smotherman said.

"But it didn't really hit me until we got to the hospital There I sorta fell apart," he continued.

Smotherman doesn't really know why the boy picked his store to rob. "We really don't do much cash business. Ninety-eight percent of our business is plastic.

"I would have given him the $60 in the cash register if he had asked," but given the circumstances Smotherman believes he did the right thing.

"Really and truly, I'm afraid the little guy would have shot me in the head, if I had given him the money, so there wouldn't have been any witnesses," he said.

But there were witnesses all up and down Woodbury's main street. The boy was even videotaped by a camera down the street.

The boy and his friend had been up and down West Main Street repeatedly. They were apparently looking for an opportunity. No charges have been filed against the second boy, but the investigation by Woodbury Police is continuing.

"I was the only person in the store and was closing when he stepped in," Smotherman said. At that moment, other shops on West Main were either closed or were still busy.

As for his own move, "it wasn't bravery, it was stupidity," Smotherman said.

"God is keeping me here for a reason," he concluded. "I hope God steps into his (the boy's) life and takes over."

our town is committed to doing a good job."

Auburntown incumbent Mayor Roger Turney ran unopposed and was re-elected with 77 of the 78 votes cast at the Auburntown precinct. Aldermen Rita Davis, Winfred Gaither and Tina Fletcher were elected to city council.

Cannon Countians voted predominately Republican in the races for state and national elections. More than 60 percent of the 5,077 voters preferred Gov. Mitt Romney in the Presidential race. Romney received 3,308 votes in Cannon County, as opposed to 1,560 (31 percent) for Barack Obama Bob Corker, R, received 3,189 (70 percent) of the votes for the U.S. Senate. Mark E. Clayton, D, picked up 1,088 votes.

Diane Black, R, was a runaway winner for the U.S. House 6th District seat with 3,094 votes, and Mark Pody, R, was unopposed and earned 3,173 votes.

COACH---

Members of the board agreed.

"We are only awarding this stipend for this year as far as taking it from the assistant football position that was not utilized this year," Blackburn said. "Next year football will have that stipend and we should revisit this in terms of adding it into the budget for 2013-14."

Football currently receives three stipends - one for the head coach and two for assistant coaches

In what was a brief agenda, Director of Schools Barbara Parker gave a report on the recent release of the State Report Card for Schools. The Cannon County Schools System received passing marks and demonstrated growth in almost every area, including graduation rate and attendance at Cannon County High School. In fact, Cannon County High School's attendance rate of 94.6 percent is above the state level (93 percent). The system showed growth in math, which was a point of emphasis last year. (The Cannon Courier will have a full report on the Schools Report Card in the Nov. 21 edition).

The Board of Education also unanimously approved bids for pest control and fire extinguishers, going with the low bid in both instances.

The next Board Meeting Workshop will be at the Central Office at 6 p.m., Dec. 11, and the next regular Board Meeting will be Dec. 13 at 6 p.m., at Woodbury Grammar School election has been certified, Winfree said.

Then it will be up to Woodbury to establish the process governing retail liquor stores, including the number of stores allowed, she said.

The permitting process is handled differently by various towns and cities in Tennessee, but the bottom line is Tennessee ABC approval.

In Murfreesboro, a license for a retail liquor package store must be first obtained from the ABC, but before an application can be submitted, the applicant must be approved by City Council.

A $100 fee must be submitted along with an application. Additionally, the business must be posted as applying for a liquor license (new location or new owner). The applicant must pay to advertise in the local paper they have applied for a liquor license and when the public hearing will be to consider the application. The city of Murfreesboro will provide the information for the advertisement.

In Tullahoma, applicants must also go through the City Board of Alderman a certificate of after compliance is issued and a study is completed.

As for the state, the laws governing liquor sales are lengthy and very specific and govern everything from pricing (no wholesale prices) to decorating inside the stores (Decorating with crepe paper, "Corabuff" matting, or similar material as a background or setting for advertising material only is permitted but such decoration is limited to a 20-square-foot area, per wholesaler) is well defined.

TTU historian helps bring artifacts from York's famed WWI battle site to Tennessee

Tom Nolan, Michael Kelly, Fred Castier, Yves Desfosses, Michael Birdwell and Roland Destenay recovered hundreds of artifacts from the battlefield in France. Destenay is holding a collar disk stamped 328 Infantry G.

A U.S. Army collar disk, stamped 328 Infantry G, is part of the "In the Footsteps of Sergeant York" exhibit opening Saturday at the Military Branch of the Tennessee State Museum.

COOKEVILLE Remnants of American history from a World War I battle that ended 94 years ago are going on exhibit, beginning in war hero Alvin C. York's home state Tennessee of and eventually travelling to other states and on to France.

After years of research to verify the battle site where York and his men overtook a German stronghold outside Châtel Chéhéry, France, a Tennessee Tech University historian and a Middle Tennessee State University geographer led a team in 2006 to find the battlefield and begin recovering more than 1,400 artifacts of war.

"Americans are woefully ignorant of the First World War, and as we approach the 100th anniversary of the conflict, the exhibit will, hopefully, begin to create new interest in the conflict," said Michael Birdwell, TTU associate history professor.

"While involved in just over eight months of fighting in 1918, more than twice as many Americans died than in 10 years in Vietnam. It is altogether fitting that this exhibit is opening on the eve of Veterans' Day."

Uncovered shell casings, gravesites and German and American artifacts strongly support that the site is indeed the battleground where York's company killed 21 German soldiers and captured another 132 during an attack Oct. 8, 1918.

The most prized find for Birdwell is a U.S. Army collar disk, stamped 328 Infantry G.

"The collar disk connects us to the people who fought in this war, and assures us that we know where some of them rest," said Birdwell. "Seeing these artifacts helps us walk in their shoes and tangibly experience history instead of just talking about it."

One of those people that readily Tennesseans connect to is York. One of Tennessee's most celebrated veterans and a native of Fentress County, York was one of 17 members of Company G of the 328th Infantry Regiment of the 82nd Division.

The 328th was sent to rescue nine companies from the 308th Infantry of the New York 77th Division, members of the Lost Battalion who were cut off from allied supply lines and surrounded by German troops.

The rescue effort took place during the Meuse-Argonne Offensive, an allied assault on German lines and the last major battle of World War I.

After 47 days of fighting in the hillsides between the Argonne Forest and the Meuse River, near Châtel Chéhéry, France, York was promoted to sergeant and awarded the Medal of Honor, which details his actions on Oct. 8, 1918.

"After his platoon had suffered heavy casualties and three other noncommissioned offers had become casualties, Cpl. York assumed command," according to the medal's documentation. "Fearlessly leading seven men, he charged with great daring a machinegun nest which was pouring deadly and incessant fire upon his platoon. In this heroic feat, the machinegun nest was taken, together with 4 officers and 128 men and several guns."

The battle raged until Nov. 11, 1918. York and seven Company G soldiers, all of whom are commemorated in the exhibit, went on to march about 200 prisoners of war more than six miles south to the brigade headquarters in Varennes.

The site of the Oct. 8 fight was under dispute for years, given that a stream in the area had been rerouted and scholars had differing opinions on the exact site.

In 2006, MTSU's Tom Nolan used geographic information system technology to combine spatial information from French and German battle maps and maps annotated by York's commanding officers, Col. G. Edward Buxton and Maj. E. C. B. Danforth, with written accounts by both German and American participants. The information was then superimposed upon the modern landscape to help the international research team focus their metal detection fieldwork.

"The first trip, we were in the field three days and found nothing. Then we realized our metal detectors were on different settings," Birdwell said. "We were right on top of it.'

From 2006 to 2009, the team recovered hundreds of artifacts as well as the graves of the six members of the 328th who died in the fighting on Oct. 8. Pvt. William E. Wine is known to have died with a head wound. A helmet with a gunshot hole was uncovered by the research team and will be on exhibit. It is believed to be Wine's helmet.

Other found artifacts are items discarded by German soldiers as thev surrendered to U.S. forces, including gas masks and filters, bayonets, Mauser rifle bolts and fired German rifle rounds.

Spent Colt .45 rounds were found at the site as well. York is known to have had a pistol, and forensic testing by the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation on the artifacts has concluded that at least one other American soldier carried a revolver. Pistols were not standard issue for nonofficers commissioned during World War I, but most soldiers made sure they acquired one, Birdwell said.

"In the Footsteps of Sergeant York" will open Saturday, Nov. 10, at the Military Branch of the Tennessee State Museum, which is in the War Memorial Building on 6th Ave. in downtown Nashville. Admission is free.

Former TTU student and Southern Illinois University alumnus David Currey designed the exhibit panels, written by Nolan and Birdwell and commissioned by Dr. David McCoy and the Museum of the American Military Experience.

Cannon County hoops teams open season with seven straight at home

TONY STINNETT Courier Sports Editor

Basketball players at Cannon County will be in a comfort zone at the outset of the 2012-13 season, which opens with a home doubleheader against Cumberland County Tuesday.

Cannon County opens the season with seven straight games at Robert A. Harris Gymnasium beginning with Tuesday's clash against visiting Cumberland County at 6 p.m. The Lions play 15 minutes following the completion of the girls game. Both teams face Marion County Friday. Both games are TSSAA Hall of Fame games.

"It is rare to have such a long homestand at the start of the season but it worked out and it gives our fans a chance to see our teams and become familiar with them early," said Michael Dodgen, CCHS athletics director and Lionettes Head Basketball Coach. "It is also a good opportunity for our teams to face good competition on our home floor, where we have played well in recent years. We have great fans at Cannon County and they are a big part of our success.'

The Lionettes return three starters from last year's Region 4-AA semifinalist, including 2012 Class AA Miss Basketball Finalist Abbey Sissom.

Jordan Hollis is also back at a guard position and Ashley Basham returns in the paint. Expect junior Madison Walkup to have a breakout season in a more significant role.

The Lions return several players but also welcome the addition of several newcomers who could factor heavily into the team's success. Senior Jarrett Melton and junior Cory Henley are the team's top returning scorers, but Tommy Mitchell and Tanner Larson have enjoyed strong offseasons. Sophomores Garrett McReynolds, Jacob Nave, and Corey Ruehlen will make an impact.

"The more things change, the more they stay the same." The well-known and constantly referred to quote, attributed to a French journalist by the name of Jean-Baptist Alphonse Karr, has been around for more than 150 years.

Although political in nature, it has been used to describe countless events and situations over the last century and a half. Since last week's national election, the quote has been used in record proportions.

President Barack Obama has been chosen to lead our country for another four-year term, the Democratic Party still controls the United States Senate and the Republican Party remains in charge of the House of Representatives. It took nearly $6 BILLION to keep things the way they were in Washington.

And after round two of the T.S.S.A.A. state playoffs, the quote appears to be quite relevant on the high school gridiron as well. Maryville is still an odds-on favorite to win another 6A title. After a slow start, Greeneville has continued to post impressive numbers over the last few weeks. And most feel the Alcoa vs. C.A.K. game this week will again determine who will win another 3A crown. Another famous quote ("hope springs eternal"), however, has fans hoping for change where high school football champions are concerned in the Volunteer State.

In 6A, those who follow the Siegel Stars or the Whitehaven Tigers have the highest hopes of dethroning the Rebels.

In 5A, the tide has already turned. Defending state champion Henry County bowed out of the post season in opening round play two weeks ago in Memphis, falling to Hamilton by a 22-20 margin.

In 4A, many midstate followers of the game think Giles County (2009 winner) has a chance to displace Greeneville as the two-time defending champion. I personally think the 4A champ will be Covington. In 3A, 2011 winner

C.A.K. and 12-time titlist Alcoa meet again this week in quarterfinal round play. It's the fourth time in four years that these district foes have met in the post season. In three previous meetings, the winner has gone on to win a state title. Will it happen again? It's very likely, unless someone like C.P.A. or Cheatham County can score an upset?

In 2A, Friendship Christian makes its final run against public schools this year. The Commanders will compete in Division II next year. And in 1A, local hopes hinge on Gordonsville scoring its first state title since 1984. The Tigers cleared a key hurdle last week by beating their old nemesis South Pittsburg. Other obstacles are still out there. \Will things stay the same where state football titles are concerned this year? My guess is we'll see a lot more changes than we did on Election Day.

Literary and Wine Appreciation Society November meeting of the Literary and Wine Appreciation Society was held in October with not only great, or near great, wines, but also great food.

Those of you who are still on the fence about joining us are missing a treat. Have no fear, the group plows ahead into the holiday season with our next meeting in November back at 100 College Street in beautiful downtown Woodbury.

The book, which has already been devoured by many in the group and proves to be an interesting read, is Heading Out to Wonderful by Robert Goolrick Some may remember Goolrick's debut novel A Reliable Wife and will enjoy this second effort about "the dark side of announcement passion set in mid-century America in a small Virginia town." Publishers Weekly says, "Goolrick's tale of doomed love resonates like a folk ballad, with the language of the Blue Ridge Mountains and its people giving this novel its soul . . It packs an emotional punch, and then haunts readers with its quintessentially American refrain."

What wine can stand up to this? Apparently only whites from the west coast, which has sort of a nice ring to it. Whites from the west.

Pick your western white and join us on Sunday, November 25, at 2:30 in the afternoon for a lively discussion of Heading Out to Wonderful at 100 College Street. This will be a lot of

Avoid adding extra pounds: holiday survival tips

The holidays are here again! It's that special time of year to celebrate with friends, family, and coworkers but unfortunately, for many, practicing healthy-holiday and staying eating committed to exercise can often be a challenge and can lead to weight gain.

Studies have shown that the average American gains five pounds between Thanksgiving and New Year's, mainly due to lack of moderation with foods and failing to stick with an exercise program. You can enjoy the holidays and still avoid those extra pounds.

Don't go to a party hungry. Eat something

This party. will help you resist over the eating delectable holiday foods being offered. Look for fruit d n vegetables to help satisfy your urge to eat. Eat more low-calorie foods. Foods that are lower in calories are also more filling. Vegetables, fruits and whole grains are sensible choices that help you feel full.

you

Control your portions. Go for small portions so vou can sample a variety of foods. Moderation is always the key.

Bring a favorite lowcalorie dish to holiday parties. This will guarantee at least one "safe" food will be available.

Don't stand by the food. This will help minimize temptation. Try to indulge in conversation instead.

Limit alcohol consumption. Alcohol increases your appetite and lowers your inhibitions which could make you less concerned about eating healthy. If you do drink alcohol, drink plenty of water avoid to dehvdration.

Practice using recipe substitutes. Try the following lower-fat recipe substitutes: instead of one whole egg, use 2 egg whites; instead of regular sour cream, use low-fat plain yogurt or low-fat sour cream; instead of whole milk, use skim or 1%; instead of ice cream, use frozen yogurt; instead of regular cheese, use low fat cheese; instead of heavy cream (if not being used for whipping), use 2 Tbsps. flour whisked into 2 cups skim milk.

Put things into perspective. Enjoy the holidays by centering most of your entertainment around non-food events renting holiday like movies, ice skating, or touring holiday displays.

Make time for fitness. Remind yourself that exercise is a priority no matter how hectic the season feels. Following a consistent exercise program is a key element to maintaining a healthy lifestyle and avoiding weight gain.

Adams Memorial Library News

Happy Fall from the libraries of Cannon County. At Adams Memorial Library in Woodbury, we have a lot to be thankful for. Our new addition and remodeling are proceeding beautifully and we hope to be back in our regular area by the first of the year.

The temporary guarters are pretty noisy some times and we appreciate the cheerful attitude that most of you have regarding that noise when you come to see us.

We are choosing some new furnishings now for the remodeled first floor. If you would like to donate the money to fund one (or more) of the pieces of furniture we have chosen, please contact the library.

Remember that while we are in our temporary quarters, we are still offering regular fax service, photocopying, and some public Internet computers.

To get to the entrance right now, please take the sidewalk between the library and the Adams House Bed and Breakfast. Remember too that the entire genealogy collection can be accessed at the vacant church building next to the post office loaned to us by Neal Appelbaum of Reed Realty. It is open Mondays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and is staffed by volunteer extraordinaire Peggy Tate.

Farm Service Agency, announced that the 2012 FSA county committee elections are underway as ballots were mailed to eligible voters in Local Administrative Area # 2 on Nov. 5. Dec. 3, 2012, is the deadline for eligible voters to return ballots, either post marked in the mail or delivered in person, to their local FSA offices.

"The FSA county committee system is unique among government agencies, because it allows producers to make important decisions concerning the local administration of federal farm programs," said Green. "I urge all eligible farmers and ranchers, especially minorities and women, to get involved and make a real difference in their communities by voting in this year's elections."

Committee members apply their knowledge and judgment to make decisions on disaster and conservation payments, establishment of allotments yields, producer and appeals, employing FSA county executive directors and other local issues. FSA committees operate within regulations official designed to carry out federal laws.

To be an eligible voter, farmers and ranchers must participate or cooperate in FSA programs. A person who is not of legal voting age, but supervises and conducts the farming operations of an entire farm, can also vote.

Agricultural producers in each country submitted candidate names during the nomination period held last summer.

Eligible voters in Local Administrative Area # 2 who do not receive a ballot can obtain a ballot at their local USDA Service Center. Dec. 3, 2012, is the last day for voters to submit ballots at in person the DeKalb/Cannon County USDA Service Center. Ballots returned by mail must be postmarked no later than Dec. 3. Newly elected committee members and alternates take office Jan. 1, 2013.

How to choose and plant trees

Trees and shrubs enhance the aesthetic, environmental and economic value of vour property, and fall is the ideal time to add them to your landscape. Dr. Wayne Clatterbuck, a forestry specialist with University of Tennessee Extension, offers these tips for successfully adding trees to your landscape:

* Select the right tree for the right purpose. If you're looking for shade, the tree should be large and sturdy. If you want aesthetics, the tree should feature a graceful form and showy foliage or flowers. To attract wildlife, berry or mastproducing trees/shrubs are useful. A wide variety of species and sizes are usually available at local nurseries. Choose the one that best fits your purpose.

* Avoid fast-growing, weak-wooded species such as silver maple, Bradford pear, lombardy poplar, Leyland cypress or Siberian elm. These and other species have proven to be problems in Tennessee or species susceptible to disease and insects.

* Select the right tree for the available space. Avoid planting large forest and shade tree species in areas with limited space for root or crown growth (next to structures, under power lines, near sewer or water lines, driveways and sidewalks). Many species become very large. If planted in a confined area, the tree may become a future problem. If space is limited, select a smaller tree species.

Select the right tree for the environmental conditions. Many species

* Plant at the right time. Trees should be planted when they are dormant and not actively growing. Avoid planting during the growing season or when soils are frozen. The best planting months are November-March. Avoid planting on excessively hot, cold, or windy days.

* Plant your tree right. Take the extra time to dig a planting hole that will be large enough to accommodate all the roots and to allow them to grow and expand. Use the natural soil to fill the planting hole. Do not add soil amendments or fertilizer.

* Give your new tree a helping hand. Water twice a week to maintain soil in a moist condition, but do not overwater. Mulch the area around newly planted shade trees, but do not allow the mulch to touch the tree. Mulch helps to control

Have you heard what is moving right next door to your home?

Right now, government officials have to publish their intentions in the newspaper, including where they intend to build facilities you don't want down the block. But that will change if some politicians get their way. They want to start putting public notices online instead, buried somewhere on a little seen, rarely visited government website.

UCHRA Transportation offers more than you know

Cumberland Upper Human Resource Agency (UCHRA) was created by the General assembly in 1973 some 39 years ago. UCHRA has been awarded many contracts over the vears, and none more important than the transportation program, which it has operated in the 14 Upper Cumberland Counties its serves. UCHRA been providing has transportation to this region for more than 34 years.

UCHRA's Transportation program is funded in large amount by the federal Section 5311 Program. This program is a rural program that is formula based and provides funding to states for the purpose of supporting public transportation in rural areas, with population of less than 50,000. The goal of the program is to provide the following services to with communities population less than 50,000: Enhance the access of people in nonurbanized areas to health care, education. shopping, employment, public services, and recreation.

Assist in the maintenance, development, improvement, and use of areas. - Encourage and facilitate the most efficient use of all transportation funds used to provide passenger transportation in nonurbanized areas through the coordination of programs and services. Assist in the development and support of intercity bus transportation. Provide for the participation of private transportation providers in nonurbanized transportation.

In other words, UCHRA's Transportation Program is a transportation public system. Better known by most people in the Upper Cumberland as UCARTS, this public transit system is more than for the elderly and taking low income citizens to the doctor. UCARTS is available to serve all of the public no matter their age or income bracket. With 48 hours' notice, anyone in the Upper Cumberland can book a ride with UCARTS to go shopping, go to the movies, get their hair done, and go to work, go to school, or go out to lunch. And of course, UCARTS is available for doctor's appointments and trips to the hospital.

decades, many people are unaware of the services offered through this program. Such as, UCARTS makes three trips a day Monday through Friday to and from the Nashville Airport. This is door to door service when booking 48 hours in advance, or from the hub with same day service based on occupancy. So if you need a ride to the movies or to the airport you are encouraged to contact your local UCHRA Office to schedule vour next ride. Call (615) 563-2916.

Ask Ken Beck

"Price Is Right" host was proud to be a Marine

Dear Ken: How long has Drew Carey been host of "The Price Is Right"?

Carey took over the gig that Bob Barker held forever in the fall of 2007. The 54-year-old Cleveland, Ohio, native served in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserves from 1980 to 1986, which was when he adopted his trademark crew cut and hornrimmed glasses. It was while in the Reserves that he made his start as a stand-up comedian. "I think if I did not have such a great break, I would still be in the military," Carey said. "I still wear my hair short and have the glasses. Also, I enjoyed the regimen and camaraderie. I knew that once I left the Reserves, I would give back to the military, so I teamed up with the USO."

Dear Ken: Is the 1970s pop band America still performing? The trio of Dan Peek, Gerry Beckley and Dewey Bunnell first hit the pop charts in 1971 with their No. 1 hit "Horse With No Name." They continued to score with such tunes as "A Horse With No Name," "Ventura Highway" and "Sister Golden Hair." Peek left the band in 1977 to devote himself to contemporary Christian music and later signed with Pat Boone's Lamb & Lion Records. He died in July 2011 at 60. Beckley and Bunnell continue to perform and are in the midst of a tour that takes them to Bowling Green, Ky., on Nov. 17.

Dear Ken: I just saw Salma Hayek in "Here Comes the Boom." Where is she from?

Salma Hayek Jiménez, 46, was born in Coatzacoalcos, Veracruz, Mexico, the daughter of an oil company executive and an opera singer and talent scout. Her father is of Lebanese descent while her mom is of Spanish descent.

Dear Ken: What is the name of the short actor who plays Kramer's friend Mickey on "Seinfeld"?

That is 4-foot-tall Danny Woodburn, 40. A dwarf, Woodburn serves as an advocate for disabled and Little People issues and is on the Screen Actors Guild Performers with Disabilities Committee. Also a stand-up comedian, he has appeared on more than 120 TV shows and worked in the films "Jingle All the Way," "The Flintstones in Viva Rock Vegas," "Employee of the Month," "Watchmen," "Murder World" and "Mirror Mirror."
