Festive, funny and somewhat scary scarecrows decorate Woodbury's Square as youngsters and parents prepare for Halloween. This year's weather reports call for excellent trick or treatin' conditions.

Commission discusses sick time policies

TONY STINNETT
Courier Sports Editor

Shirley Young, a former employee in the County Trustee's Office, was hoping unused sick time she had accrued during her time in the office would be paid to her after leaving the job; however, that will not be the case.

County Commissioner Jim Bush suggested the current county policy regarding sick and vacation days is "vague and needs to be re-evaluated" based on how it is currently written during the quarterly meeting of the Cannon County Commission at the County Courthouse Saturday (Oct. 18).

Bush made a motion that Young receive pay for the unused sick days but the motion did not get a second and no further action was taken. Bush made his motion based on information provided by Young, who said she was informed she would be paid

One vote made major change for Readyville

MIKE WEST
Courier Editor

One vote does matter. At least in the case of Readyville, one vote did make a major difference. Now Readyville is unincorporated and its rival, Murfreesboro, has a population of 118,676. Back in 1811, both communities were vying for the title of county seat.

Boyd Barker shared the community's story during a meeting of PARQ at Readyville Mill. PARQ is an abbreviation of Preserve the Area's Rural Qualities.

A decision was made to relocate the Rutherford County seat from Jefferson due to the decreased navigability of Stones River.

"Charles Ready was very interested in locating the county seat on his property on the Stone River," Barker said. "The federal government was the one who named this place Readyville and they appointed Charles Ready as the first postmaster.

"Ready had great vision for the place that bears his name, including having it chosen as the new county seat of Rutherford County. And his vision almost became reality. However, some of his fellow court members had similar plans

Get ready for fun on Halloween

With only a slight chance of rain predicted, Halloween night should attract its share of youthful ghosts and hobgoblins Friday night.

Trick or treaters can get an early start on festivities by stopping at the Farmers Co-Op Market at 400 McMinnville Highway in Woodbury. Co-Op will be handing out free candy, popcorn and fountain drinks to young spooks. The market is open until 8 p.m.

Woodbury Health and Rehab, 119 W. High St., is inviting youngsters to drop by as well from 5 to 8 p.m. Candy and popcorn are on the treat list.

In downtown Woodbury, High and College Streets are much like a big Trunk 'N Treat on Halloween evening. Those streets

Police nab 4 suspects during bust

Four were arrested on several drug-related charges following a raid by Woodbury Police at a house on McBroom Street.

Taken into custody were Stephanie H. Wilson, Stephanie L. Wilson, Steven C. Medley and Gina E. House. Making the raid were Patrolmen Sebastian Krauss, Tracey Stoetzel, John House and Timmy

'Ghost Lydia' tale adds to Smoky lore

DAN WHITTLE
Courier Correspondent

Plans called for it to be a non-working vacation.

But, a recent trip to East Tennessee's majestic Smoky Mountains produced more than a handful of notable things to take notes about.

Our group was there as fall and its beautiful artistry of autumn leaves gave way for the first cold blast of winter with October's arrival.

And nothing seems to go better on a blustery, cold winter's night than a piping hot cup of cocoa laced with a chilling "GHOST STORY" as Halloween 2014 approaches.

Brrrr! ... and pass the hot chocolate.

Our late-night spirit-laden tale's trail began at Gatlinburg's vintage Greenbrier Restaurant that goes back in mountain folklore to the late 1930s, when the original Greenbrier Lodge initially catered to wealthy hunters, travelers and vacationers from North Carolina to the East and Knoxville, Nashville and Memphis to the West.

Jason, our table server, confessed he's never seen "Lydia," but that fellow Greenbrier work associates "have witnessed food items being knocked off food shelves in the restaurant pantry."

"And some diners have seen Lydia, in the form of a petite young girl, on the stairs in this old building," Jason added while adding ghostly sprinkles to spice up our plates of succulent stuffed pork tenderloin, a specialty of the restaurant recommended by previous restaurant diner Holly Sal-mons of Smyrna.

Meet "Lydia," a spirit legend that has been lingering and languishing around the Greenbrier for nearly a century now, according to a restaurant-printed history of her whereabouts dating back to the 1930s.

Gatlinburg is known for. "Her spirit is often seen on the stairs of the second floor landing. Guests who eat here claim to see her small, sad figure wandering around from time-to-time."

"Some fellow employees also claim to feel her chilling presence," server Jason served.

Life to this spirit legend was born back in the mountain's mist and haze of time, when a woman by the name of Lydia reportedly stayed at the Greenbrier Lodge off of Highway 321 in Gatlinburg.

"Young and in a love, Lydia was engaged to be married to a handsome young man who lived in town here," according to ghostly-printed history provided for tourists at

Dr. Billy K. Walker

Dr. Billy K. Walker (Doc), 83, of Woodbury passed away on October 21, 2014 after an extended illness. He was born on May 20, 1931 in Beechgrove, Tennessee. He was preceded in death by his parents, Joseph Rayburn "Bill" Walker and Jamie (Covington) Walker Jarman.

He is survived by his daughter and son-in-law, Jamie and Dan Helton of Christiana; son and daughter-in-law, Ken and Ingrid Walker of Woodbury; brother, Joe Tom Walker of Beechgrove; grandchildren, Evan Gilman and Carley Gilman and step-grandson, Jim Grizzle.

Doc grew up on the family farm. He learned to work hard in their dairy and to love animals. He attended Manchester Central High School for two years and earned a scholarship to play football at Columbia Military Academy for his last two years of high school. Vanderbilt University awarded him a football scholarship and he later transferred to Tennessee Wesleyan College. Doc served in the U. S. Army during the Korean War where he was trained in teletypewriter equipment and maintenance and went on to be an instructor in the military. Following his service in the Army he was awarded a football scholarship to attend Kansas State University's Veterinary School and he graduated with his Doctorate in Veterinary Medicine. After graduation he moved to Woodbury with his family and began his veterinary practice. Doc served as the only veterinarian in both Cannon and Dekalb Counties for about twenty years.

Doc had a love for and interest in Cannon County. It led him to be involved in many different ventures. He was one of the founding owners of the Woodbury Nursing Home in the 1970's. Dr. Walker was active in church and was a member of the Grace Assembly of God. He spent many hours working on the food drives through the church. His love for animals and people gave him the opportunity to come into contact with many people. Doc was well known for taking in stray dogs, horses, birds or any other animal that needed care. He also raised coon hounds and enjoyed coon hunting in his limited leisure time.

Doc's busy work schedule didn't bother him at all since his work was his joy. He wanted to share his love of animals with his children and grandchildren. During the summer he loved to have his grandchildren come stay with him on the farm. He introduced them to farming and the vet business. His daughter and granddaughter were both active with show and competition horses. He loved to watch them show whenever he could.

Visitation for family and friends was held at Smith Funeral Home on Monday, October 27, 2014 from 4-9 PM. The family will hold a private funeral service. In lieu of flowers the family requests memorial donations to the Big Fluffy Dog Rescue. They have been very helpful in finding good homes for many of Doc's animals. The family would like to express their sincere gratitude for the love and care provided by Francis Buse in the last few months of his life. ## Courier columnist Rounding up some facts on hot Mustangs

Meat 'n' Potatoes
MIKE VINSON

The week's column was inspired by several different, though directly correlated, events. If it works as planned, both young and older readers might learn something useful.

A few years back, I was at a car show, and this young fellow and his young girlfriend were proudly standing by his shiny Shelby Mustang convertible, top down. Thinking back, I'm gonna say this particular Mustang car was somewhere between a 2008-2010 in year made.

I commented along the lines of, "Nice ride - that Carroll Shelby was a true genius."

"Who's she?" the young woman genuinely inquired.

"You mean Eleanor, the Mustang Nicholas Cage drove in the movie 'Gone in 60 Seconds'?" the young man piped in.

OK, let's stop right here and I'll ask you Mustang car owners and enthusiasts a couple questions? Are you familiar with the name Carroll Shelby? Are you familiar with Eleanor, in terms of Mustang vehicles?

In no way attempting to come across as a Mustang expert/historian, I'll share with you some of what the young couple and I discussed that day at the car show.

Put simply, Carroll Hall Shelby (Jan. 11, 1923 - May 10, 2012) was an iconic trend setter in the automotive industry. A successful race car driver, he was light years ahead of a majority of his peers in automotive design and concept.

Shelby is best known for helping design the two-seater AC Cobra sports car, a.k.a. Ford/Shelby AC Cobra, manufactured 1962-1967, and also the Shelby Mustang, manufactured 1965-1970. The AC Cobra was lightning fast for its time and meant to capture some of the Chevrolet Corvette market. The Shelby Mustang was a higher performance variant of the stock Mustang; burning rubber and getting sideways vs. cruising within the speed limit on a Sunday afternoon.

Best I can research, the Shelby Mustang nameplate was revived in 2007 and has continued ever since.

Now for "Eleanor":

Indeed, "Eleanor" is the codename for the 1967 Ford Mustang GT500 fastback Nicholas Cage drove in the 2000 movie "Gone in 60 Seconds," about a top-notch car theft ring led by Randall "Memphis" Raines (Cage), under pressure to steal 50 exotic cars in 96 hours, in order to save his younger brother, Kip.

Back to the young couple standing by the Shelby Mustang convertible: We agreed the movie "Gone in 60 Seconds"--"Eleanor," specifically--was responsible for a renewed interest in Shelby Mustang cars. I then asked the young couple if they'd ever seen the movie "Bullit," a crime thriller (1968) starring Steve McQueen, "King of Cool," as tough San Francisco cop Frank Bullit, who drives a 1968 Ford Mustang GT fastback. The car chase scene between McQueen, in the Mustang, and the bad guys, in a 1968 Dodge Charger R/T, is classic and, arguably set the standard for car chase scenes in filmmaking.

They commented they neither had seen nor heard of "Bullit."

I told the couple that while Eleanor, in fact, was a famous Mustang, I personally felt the Mustang McQueen drove in the movie "Bullit" was the most famous Mustang car ever.

The young fellow smiled and said, "Cool--we'll have to check out that flick with McQueen. ... Yeah, cool."

A major point to be made at this juncture is: Had there not been the car genius of Carroll Shelby, there might never have been a "Bullit," and, metaphorically speaking, the Mustangs might be casually grazing in the pasture instead of still "galloping on asphalt" in wild herds!

Oh, I almost forgot: I recently purchased and read a book titled "Motor Trend Presents Shelby." A quote from the book reads: "Carroll Shelby's story is one of guts, grit and gumption. It is the tale of high speeds and higher risks, of winning -- and losing -- on the world's biggest stages. It is a primer on international motor racing, a case study of ingenuity and entrepreneurship, and a treatise on American performance cars."

Had I not read "Motor Trend Presents Shelby," I doubt I would've written this column.

I think it's pretty "cool" the way it all just fell into place.

Courier columnist TV commercial claims to support male greatness

Some TV commercials are so stupid, I instantly click to the weather.

But there's a current one I like, to wit, the "Jockey" brand men's underwear commercial that closes its television spot with this robust manly claim: "Supporting Greatness!"

I think most men can identify with male under garments that claim to be "supporting greatness," whether it's true or not.

And I believe in the value of advertising that paid my mostly-modest media salary the past 50 years.

That recent TV commercial about male drawers made by the "Jockey" Co. takes me back to 1993, when as a foreign war correspondent, I caught some personal flack over a protective flak jacket while flying on U.S. military war machines over war-torn Bosnia.

My assignment for the hometown newspaper back in Tennessee was to cover the Tennessee Air National Guard and brave C-130 flight crews, flying relief missions of food, medicine and water to starving war refugees in Europe's latest holocaust where one brand of people, the Bosnian Serbs, were attempting genocide of folks not of their ethnic, political and religious persuasion.

You might get an understanding of my liking the recent TV commercial uplifting male undergarments "supporting greatness" by reading what now retired Lt. Col. Guard Public Information Officer Hooper Penuel of Lascassas penned as a chapter in my first published book: "Canalou: People, Culture, Bootheel Town."

As I said before, I believe in marketing.

But, Penuel best tells the story: "During our most dangerous missions over Sarajevo and Srebrenica, Bosnia, where our aircraft was hit multiple times by Serbian ground fire, Whittle decided to promote by attaching "Canalou" and "Toot's Restaurant" T-shirts to food and medicine parcels going out of our Guard C-130 aircraft to starving and wounded civil war refugees. I still wouldn't be surprised to see one of those T-shirts on CNN."

But now, as the late great radio Paul Harvey liked to say: "The Rest of the Story."

Penuel shares the details: "Before our flights into combat zones, we were issued flak jackets and Kevlar helmets for protection against possible enemy fire over Bosnia."

"Well, Whittle, the wonder boy from Canalou, Mo., knew what to do with his flak jacket. Lo and behold, we found him sitting on not one, but two flak jackets."

"When asked for an explanation, Whittle replied thusly: 'The Serbs don't have an air force. They're shooting from the ground up at our relief-flying planes. So in case I want to have a family one day, well, I'm sitting on my flak jackets ... you know, protecting the family jewels.' We took that to be some Canalou-inspired country boy logic, Whittle-style."

That analogy should help explain why I like male underwear Jockey brand TV commercial's claim of their male underwear: "Supporting Greatness."

And that's all I have to say about that!!

Courier columnist Billions spent on care of pets

A Shot of Wry
LARRY WOODY

While channel-flipping the other day I came across a woman on one of those morning chat shows, distraught and fighting back tears. She was worried about an impending medical procedure for her "best friend."

Her best friend was curled in her lap -- a fat old tomcat named Fluffy. Seems Fluffy was ailing from either hemorrhoids or irritable-bowel syndrome.

The woman had taken her best friend to a pet clinic, but the diagnosis was vague and the vets wanted to take another look (do a cat-scan?) for another $500.

Fluffy's medical bill is part of an estimated $10 billion -- that's billion with a B -- that is spent annually in the U.S. on health care for pets.

I agree with Garrison Keillor when he writes:

"If your gerbil Mitzi needs a new heart valve and you've got the fifteen grand to spend on it, I am not here to stand in your way."

I also agree with Garrison that it's stupid. He said he tends to look at pets in much the same way as his dad:

"He did not purchase jewelry for them, or talk to them in a high-pitched voice. He would have blanched at the thought that the average cost of a visit to the vet with your cat is now $172. The chance of Dad paying that much to care for Snowball was about the same as Snowball's chance in hell."

Some of today's more extreme pet-pamperers refer to themselves as a "pet parent."

When we got our black Lab Buddy from the pound as a puppy, I explained to him how it was going to work around our house: We weren't his "parents." We were his "owners" and he was a "dog."

We agreed to keep him fed, but not on any of that fancy gourmet dog chow. Buddy would eat mostly leftovers from whatever we ate.

We'd keep him cool in the summer and warm in the winter, but weren't going to knit him sweaters.

He'd have a collar, plain, no jewels. There would be no bling for Buddy.

We wouldn't be sending him to "pet spas" for relaxing rubdowns. We would occasionally rub his tummy and scratch his ears, and that was about it.

There would be no manicures -- I occasionally clip his toenails -- and no bubble baths. About once a month I soak him down with a garden hose, shampoo, rinse and sprinkle on some flea powder.

We take Buddy to a vet for an annual rabies shot and distemper shot. That's his "annual checkup."

If he gets worms, I buy a bottle of Worm-B-Gone and stick a couple of capsules in his food.

If he gets sick from eating a dead gopher he found in the back yard, he'll just have to hack it up. There'll be no ride to the emergency room with lights flashing and sirens wailing. Buddy can lie on the porch and do his own wailing -- and remember not to eat any more dead gophers.

We warned him not to chase cars; there's no future in it. Even if he caught one, then what?

We explained all this to Buddy, and told him if the terms were acceptable he could come live with us. He wagged his tail, which is dog talk for "OK."

That was 14 years ago, and Buddy has always been healthy and seemed happy. Well, except for scarfing down an occasional dead gopher. That's his problem, and he has to deal with it.

Buddy's medical insurance doesn't cover gophers.

What to look for at the library this week

The first week in November is full of activity for the whole family at the Adams Memorial Library. On Saturday, November 1, we have a special event for retiring librarian Rosemary Gunn. Rosemary has been a smiling face at the library for over 15 years and everyone is sad to see her leave but excited for her future as a woman of leisure. Celebrate her career from 1 to 3 P.M. The celebration will be held in the Jennings Community Room on the lower level of the library.

On Monday, November 3, adult literature lovers are invited to stop in and join the Library book club. Come to the front door of the library at 6:30 p.m. to join the group reading Annie Freeman's Famous Traveling Funeral by Kris Radish. Everyone is welcome even if you didn't get a chance to read the book.

In November, toddler stories will be held on Mondays, November 3 & 17 and Preschool Stories will be held on Tuesdays, November 4 & 18, at the Adams Memorial Library. Story-times will be held at the Auburntown Branch on Wednesdays, November 5, 13, and 19. All story-times begin at 10:30 A.M.

Remember if you have a talent you'd like to share or an idea for a program you'd like to lead or present, come by and let us know. We are always looking for new activities and programs to schedule for the Cannon County community. Don't think you're the only one who has your interests. If you lead a program you may find new friends who enjoy the same things you do. Give it a try. The library staff is here to help you bring your joy to others. If leading a program seems like a big first step, come by and volunteer to help out around the library. There is always a lot to do and we always have a lot of fun doing it. This includes Auburntown, too.

As we enter the holiday time of year, the library is preparing events to ring in the season with joy and laughter. There might even be a visit by a fat man in a red suit. Who could that be? Until then watch this space for the weekly library update so you don't miss any events you might want to attend. And, if you're wondering who won the Annual Pizza Taste-off, then stop in and find out who our teen & 'tween panel of experts voted for in this year's taste-off event.

This is your library - come early, stay all day and take books home for free.

I have lucky grandkids

My grandchildren sure are lucky and the reason is because their Granddaddy I is just about as big of a kid as they are when this time of the year comes around. I love this time of the year when the trees across Tennessee allow their leaves to turn an array of colors that would cause an artist's paint palette to seem dull in contrast to what we see on our hillsides. Fall has always been my time of the year since the early beginning of my life and the fun of Halloween has always been a huge part of the experience. The parties, the stories, the earlier beginning of evening as the season changes, the chill of the air and the excitement of the unknown still brings out the kid in me.

Just the other evening after spending the day decorating my front yard in Halloween décor for the grandkids, consisting of a small smiling spook hanging in a tree, I had settled down in my bed for a good night's sleep. At about 2:00 a.m., right outside my bedroom window, a coyote decided to make a long distance call to the rest of his pack with a scream that would have woke up the dead, which nearly included me! I had always heard the term "hair standing on the back of your neck" and that night I experienced it.

It reminded me of a Halloween night at the age of eight when I thought my existence was coming to an end. I have told this story before and it is so close to Halloween. It all began with a free plastic mask, a graveyard and popcorn balls. I grew up at a time when the only place I had a chance to trick-or-treat was at my grandparents' house about half a mile across the road. That Halloween, I had been lucky enough to win a plastic mask at a school party. It was designed from the Disney movie "Lady and The Tramp" and the mask was the face of the cocker spaniel dog Lady. Yes, I know, Lady was a girl dog and I was a little boy, but being only eight and going only to my grandparents' house to trick-or-treat, it didn't matter that much. Besides, they thought it was cute and it helped me get an extra popcorn ball.

I'll never forget that night. To get to their house I had to walk past an old family graveyard and I had to go alone. I did it everyday, but not at night and especially not at Halloween. But armed with a genuine plastic Halloween mask and the visions of popcorn balls dancing in my head (I know, it does sound like words from another story that includes a fat man in a red suit), I headed out to grandma's house.

The moon was full, the temperature was warm and the sky was clear. It was a perfect fall night to walk over to grandma's for a popcorn ball. Everything went well until I reached the graveyard. At night with the full moon shining down, the tombstones cast long shadows that I never saw during the day. And the fall night sounds seemed to be a little louder than I remembered when I left home. With my Lady mask on, I was also getting a little warm and looking through the eyeholes of that plastic dog, there was only just so much you could see and a whole lot you could hear. The pace of my steps increased automatically as I walked by and just as I reached about half way up the long lane beside the graveyard, I heard a strange sound like someone trying to whistle. However, whenever I would stop, the whistle would stop as well. The faster I would go, the more prevalent the whistle would be. I was now sweating under that stupid dog mask and the whistler was right behind me.

By the time I got past the graveyard, I was in a full run and the thoughts of popcorn balls were no longer dancing in my head. Instead, the hot mask and the fright of being caught by the whistler had caused by head to swim and I tripped over my untied shoe that my mother was always telling me to tie and fell sprawling into the yard of my grandparents'.

Looking up at the moonlit farmhouse through the eyeholes of the mask, I knew I had made it and the whistler had retreated back into the graveyard from which he had come. While lying there and trying to get my breath, feeling good that I had survived, I suddenly heard the whistle again. Not moving a muscle and holding my breath, I listened, then looked back toward the graveyard through one of the mask eyeholes. Nothing was there. Taking a deep breath, I once again heard the whistle, but this time it was really close. It was too close. In fact, the whistle was coming from me!

It had been my nose all the time and inside the plastic mask it had been amplified. But in the mind of an eight-year-old boy, a graveyard at night and a hot smelly dog mask, the sound was enough to last as an exciting memory for a grown man today.

So now I've moved up to coyotes on a plastic Lady mask, but it is still fun - young or old. Enjoy the fall season and maybe you too can make some memories happen. But be sure to blow your nose before venturing out into the night around graveyards. Happy Halloween!

Cow-calf management tips for October

October has arrived. It is the beginning of the fall season. It is the month of harvest for grain producers for most of Tennessee cow-calf producers in that the large percentage of the calf crop is weaned and marketed. Once calves are sold, producers tend to think of early fall as a "slow time."

October is not a slow month for producers. Lots of management practices should be carried out during this month. The pregnancy checking and culling of open cows are generally done during this time, health practices are applied and brood cows productive performance is evaluated. One of the more important decisions made during this month is planning the winter feeding program. There is still some grass that could be harvested to hay and/or graded in most areas.

Several spring and fall calving cows will be going into the fall and winter "thin" in body condition that would result in reduced reproductive performance. Start working on improving the body condition of the cows during this month. Calves should be weaned in order for the brood cows to improve in condition.

October is the month that the final plans should be made for the winter feeding program. Plan to use surplus grass and crop residues to reduce feed cost. Plan winter feeding practices to reduce feed waste and improve profitability.

Following are some suggested management practices for October 2014. Suggestions are included for both late - winter/early spring calving herds as well as those that calve in the late- fall/ early winter.

Late Winter-Early Spring Calving Herds

- Producers should consider weaning calves to reduce nutritional stress on beef cows, particularly with the 2 and 3 year old cows. If these young females are "thin," weaning would be especially beneficial. This will reduce the nutritional demand of the females and should allow them to improve in condition if any forage is available.

- The young females should be in better condition at subsequent calving which will contribute to maintaining an acceptable level of reproduction.

- Body condition score (BCS) the cows in the herd. This would allow ample time to make improvements in their condition, if needed. This can be done as the herd is checked in the pasture. Record numbers, estimate BCS and review again.

- Research results on calves weaned at 170 days of age showed that cows picked up 100-125 lb. weight gain over 82 days compared to those still suckling calves. This weight gain could produce an improvement of 1.2 to 1.5 in body condition scores of the dams. It takes about 82- 85 lb. of weight gain to improve condition 1 score in beef cows. Mature brood cows can get along well on lower quality forage to improve conditions.

- If producers already know the cows that they plan to cull, now would be an excellent time to market them. Definitely cull those cows that are likely to develop physical problems and could become "downers." There are lots of reports on the market price advantage to carrying cull cows over to the following January and February. Be sure ample feed supply is available to feed remainder of herd.

- First calf heifers may need to be provided extra feed to improve in condition. Feed them the best forage.

- If not already done, make plans to market or retain calves. Evaluate the alternatives in terms of anticipated cost of production.

- Bulls should be isolated, fed and managed to attain BCS of 6. Be sure they have ample room for exercise. Start making replacement heifers selection. Evaluate those that were dropped the first half of the calving season. These will be the ones that will start cycling early and can be bred to calve to fit the calving season of the mature cow herd. First calving of replacement heifers dictates the length of future calving seasons and their productive potential.

Three simple steps to keep costs down this fall

Insulate:

- Wrap a water-heater blanket around your water heater and insulate water pipes. This will keep your hot water hot and will also add up to big savings as it takes about 14 percent of your overall utility bill to provide hot water.

- Check your attic. Since warm air rises, you want to be sure it is adequately insulated. You'll know it needs more insulation if you can see your ceiling joists.

- Bundle up! Lower the temperature in your home and put on an extra layer of clothing. You save about 2 percent off your heating bill for every degree you lower your thermostat.

or install plastic security caps.

- For those with single-pane windows, add storm windows and slice your heat loss by as much as 50 percent.

dollar bill in the door as you close it. If it doesn't hold securely, replace the seal.

- Compost instead of using the garbage disposal and save gallons of water and money.

Contributed by: Karen D. Jones, Extension Agent - Haywood County

Minimize heat loss:

- Seal leaks around doors, windows and electrical outlets to ensure that your warm air is staying in and the cool air is keeping out.

- Install foam gaskets behind electrical outlets, light switches and lighting fixtures to reduce heat loss,

Save in the kitchen:

- Use glass or ceramic pans when cooking in an oven. Your food cooks just as quickly and you can reduce the cooking temperature by 25 degrees.

- Make sure your refrigerator door closes tightly. To check, put a Something you all need to see is Sheri's knit hats. For men, women and children. Matching scarves are available. She takes special orders. Very reasonable and very warm! She is a true artist at this and she even makes doggie hats. She also makes the fingerless mittens and boy, do I use those when weather gets colder here at the barn. She recently completed an order for a gentleman who loves to hunt. It was a brown camouflage. I ordered a green camouflage for J.D., my hubby. So, all you hunters order yours today. Call me at number above or better yet, c'mon in when we are open: Thursdays thru Saturdays from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Our fantastic lamp creator, Jai Sheronda, begins his art show at the Art Center in Woodbury at this time. He is famous for his unique one-of-a-kind gourd lamps. I have several in my home and love them.

He grows the gourds at the Short Mountain Trading Post, harvests them, cleans them, inserts crystals in the shade and constructs his lamp bases from unique lamps he discovers all over the place. He says they are "gourd-geous"!

We also are welcoming our new jewelry artist, Lisa Wisdom. What a talented lady! Such intricate work and so colorful! You must see! Everything is very reasonably priced and very different from the norm.

We also have welcomed some absolutely gorgeous quilts by Elizabeth Cooper. They range from $40 to $200 and sizes from crib to king. Beautiful!

Well, Festus and Clara are on vacation this week. They went to Disney World in Orlando Florida. Clara said she is going to leave him on the Dumbo ride and pick him up after she is finished enjoying the park by herself! You go, girl!

Well, I am going to run for now. Gotta start designing the barn for Christmas. Décor goes up November 1st. You folks take care and take each day as an adventure not a chore. Come see me soon at the Trading Post.

Hugs, Savannah

Miller. Krauss was lead officer on the raid.

The Wilsons were charged with promotion of methamphetamine, possession of drug paraphernalia, including syringes, spoons with residue and burn marks, cut cigarette filters, a pill grinder and a homemade marijuana pipe. Four bags of marijuana were discovered in addition to materials used to make meth.

Medley was charged with possession of marijuana with intent to sell in addition to promotion of methamphetamine and possession of drug paraphernalia. In addition, Medley was charged with tampering with evidence in connection with a syringe that was tossed out a window.

House, in addition to promotion of meth, possession with intent to sell and drug paraphernalia charges, faces possession of a Schedule II drug (meth) charge.

"I had been there twice the week before," Krauss said, investigating various complaints.

Krauss obtained a warrant and the officers raided the home and a small trailer behind it.

"We all went in from different sides," the officer said.

Evidence was discovered in both the house and the camper-style trailer. Among the discovered items were burnt spoons, syringes and ingredients of meth, in addition to four baggies of marijuana.

Hearings on the charges are set for Nov. 11. in for property of their own and among them were William Lytle and Hardy Murfree," Barker continued.

"Charles Ready invited the county court to his home and he provided a fine meal for them and that was about in 1811 and that was prior to the construction of The Corners, which was built in the late 1820s.

He lost his bid to have Readyville selected as the new county seat by a one vote margin. Four voted for Murfreesboro and three voted for Readyville, so one vote does matter as we enter into this voting season," he said.

Barker related a story about the selection process that he had heard from a direct descendant of William Lytle.

"He related the following story to me. He said William Lytle and Hardy Murfree were very close friends, both fought in the Revolutionary War and Murfree was Lytle's colonel. Once the decision was made to find a new site for a county seat, both men wanted it on their land, as did Charles Ready. At some point, the decision was made to place it in Murfreesboro and Lytle and Murfree had to make the decision on who's land it would be located. So the decision was made on the basis of a cock fight and Lytle's cock won."

After the death of Hardy Murfree, the decision was made to name the little town Murfreesboro, which later served as capital of Tennessee.

"It is feasible to imagine if Readyville had been selected as county seat, it too would have been named capital of the state of Tennessee during that time frame. Governors Joseph McMinn and William Carroll served as chief executives in Murfreesboro during the 1840s," Barker said.

Murfreesboro had the opportunity to be named the permanent capital of Tennessee. Democratic members of the state house generally favored Murfreesboro, but the Whigs backed Nashville.

"A compromise was reached. Murfreesboro officials only had to pay the $100 to transfer Tennessee's official records to Murfreesboro. It would have been so impressive for the state capital to have been built on a low hill overlooking Murfreesboro," he said. "But local officials refused to pay the $100 and the rest is history. Murfreesboro's capital hill is now home to a huge blue and white water tower instead of William Strickland's beautiful limestone capital."

With that issue settled, Charles Ready turned to his crops which included indigo and fruit trees. He built a grist mill in 1812. He built a single-story brick home one of the first in Middle Tennessee.

By 1815, Charles and his wife had 10 children ranging in age from a newborn to age 16. It wasn't until 1829 that he built the new three-story house that stands now.

"He named it, The Corners," Barker said. "A beautiful home that still stands."

The attic was used to cultivate silk worms, but the silk worms did not survive in our climate.

The Ready family continued to grow in prominence. Ready's son, also named Charles, represented Tennessee in Congress.

Originally, located in Rutherford County, Readyville was divided into by the Tennessee state Legislature on Jan. 31, 1836 when Cannon County was formed from portions of Rutherford, Smith and Warren Counties and named in honor of Gov. Newton Cannon.

The younger Ready was the father of Mattie Ready, who married Confederate Gen. John Hunt Morgan.

In February 1862, Morgan established his headquarters in Murfreesboro where he became acquainted with the Ready family and after a brief courtship married Mattie at the Ready home in Murfreesboro during what was one of the major social events of the Civil war.

Barker, himself, is a direct descendant of Charles Ready, who along with his brothers continue to live in Readyville.

LYDIA---

the eatery. "On the day of her wedding, Lydia dressed in her long, white wedding dress, and went into town to meet her love at the church."

But after several hours of waiting at the altar, Lydia reportedly returned to the Lodge.

"Unable to overcome her anger and frustration at being jilted, she climbed the stairs to the second floor landing," according to the restaurant's spook-laden pamphlet. "She threw a rope over the rafter beam, and hung herself."

However, the sad ghostly-tale does not end at the rope's end ...

"Several days after Lydia's death, her love was found dead in the Smokies, mauled to death by a big mountain cat."

And this account spawned more mystery in East Tennessee's already-storied mountains.

"The locals of that era said Lydia's spirit could not rest because of her unfulfilled love, and she had taken the form of a cat to seize revenge," our present-day source located high in the mountains accounted.

And spirit Lydia's legend did not end when the big cat mysteriously killed her love.

"A caretaker who lived at the Lodge many years ago was kept awake at night by Lydia's pitiful cries of 'mark my grave, mark my grave.'" Restaurant proprietor Becky served.

"The legend goes that after many sleepless nights listening to her cries, the caretaker could take it no longer," Becky added. "He knew the spot where she was supposedly buried, so in the dark of the night he went down the hill below the Lodge to mark her grave. He never heard her cries again ..."

Server Jason accounted the restaurant does not charge extra for the sharing of Ghost Lydia's story.

Happy Halloween 2014!

for unused days.

County Executive Mike Gannon said he had no problem with Young or any other county employee being paid for unused sick or vacation time but he added that research indicated no other county employee had previously been paid for unused time. There was also concern that paying Young for unused time would open a whole new issue in regard to other employees who had left their positions with unused time not being paid.

A second motion was made asking Gannon to determine if Young's unused time could roll over into her retirement and if she would receive pay in this way. That motion was seconded and passed.

Young told the Commissioners she had accumulated a number of sick days and it was her understanding that she would be compensated for unused time when she left her position.

Gannon was also voted Chairman of the Commission - a position he chaired for years until a change in format four years ago.

Gannon received six votes and was named Chairman. Commissioners voting in favor of Gannon as Chairman were Todd Hollandsworth, Mark Barker, Karen Ashford, Jamie Holloway, Glenn Steakley and Adam Melton.

Barker had served as Chairman the previous two years. Commissioners Russell Reed and Richie Hunter voted for Barker to remain in his current role as Chairman. Jim Bush received two votes. Bush voted for himself and also received the support of Commissioner Brent Bush.

The group also voted to move monthly meetings from the second Tuesday of each month to the second Thursday of each month beginning with November's County Commission meeting. The Commission will continue to conduct four quarterly meetings annually.

Jim Bush also indicated the County needs to start bidding on all insurance and fuel for all county-owned equipment. He said commissioners could look into enforcing the utilization of County equipment only for County business.

The American Legion Post 279 also recognized five Cannon County Employees with Outstanding Employee of the Year awards during the meeting. Commander Charlie Harrell presented certificates and trophies to Ed Brown of the Cannon County Sheriff's Department; Michael George, fire chief of the Mooretown Volunteer Fire Department; Daryl Fisher, head of county maintenance; Roger Lovvorn, Cannon County Ambulance Service; and Skylar Daniel, Cannon County Rescue Squad.

In other business, the commissioners also passed budget amendments for the Sheriff's Department and Highway Department. They also gave approval for the Mooretown Fire Department to section off property of the Fire Department for an Auxiliary Building, which will be funded through fundraisers during the year.

United Way seeks volunteers for VITA

The United Way of Rutherford and Cannon Counties is currently seeking volunteers for the 2015 Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program. VITA is a free service and will aid qualifying local residents in claiming their tax refund dollars.

The 2014 VITA program resulted in a $842,893 impact on the community through tax returns. The 2015 VITA program is set to open in late January.

Volunteers are needed from January to April to assist with the sites. Volunteer hours are flexible and depend on the volunteer's availability. Experience with tax preparation is preferred but not required.

Volunteer responsibilities will include greeting and screening to tax preparation.

Volunteer registration is available at www.unitedwayvolunteer.org. Volunteers must pass a certification test in order to be a VITA volunteer. Trainings will be provided to help potential volunteers prepare for the certification test. These trainings are not mandatory but are beneficial. For additional questions, please contact United Way at (615) 893-7303.

FEATURES FROM THE BIBLE

TRUTH IN SCRIPTURE

Zephaniah Condemns Jerusalem

Zephaniah 3

Because the people of Jerusalem have rebelled against God, God will destroy them. Every portion of the society has been affected by a corruption of the religion. God has no alternative. He must destroy the city. But there is a thread of hope. Not all will be destroyed. God has a purpose for the remnant, the humble faithful few who will survive when all human pride and self-sufficiency is gone. There will be great rejoicing. God will be in the midst of His people and He will lavish His love upon them. He will change them into a people who are pure of heart. They will return home with singing and will be restored to favor with Him.

4-H Team wins state contest after eight years of competing

At the Regional contest, Hannah Nave placed 3rd place in Senior High Poultry, Lane Francis placed 6th place in Senior High Beef, Paul Steelman placed 2nd in Senior High Pork, Ashley Swoape received 5th place in Senior High Lamb Senior High Division. The Team to placed 2nd overall. The Senior High team also placed 1st on their "Farm to Table" theme and display.

After eight years of working with Outdoor Meat Cookery Teams, Cannon County claimed victory at the state contest! After winning second at the Central Region Contest in August, the Cannon County 4-H outdoor meat cookery team took top honors in state competition, October 18, 2014, in Knoxville.

Contestants were scored on their safety and efficiency; appearance; imagination and recipe; and palatability and attractiveness of the final product. Each member of the winning team received a $50 cash award. Prior to the contest, members worked on perfecting their marinades and grilling techniques with many hours of hands-on practice. This year's theme chosen was from Farm to Table because although we are from Cannon County and understand farming, not everyone does. Farm to Table refers to the stages of the production of food: harvesting, storage, processing, packaging, sales, and consumption. However, the team members make it simple by saying everything we eat at the table ultimately comes from the farm. The theme won second place at the state contest, just two points away from first place. However, all together Cannon County defeated the second place team by 20 points. We are proud of Paul and Ashley for receiving third place in their specie and to have both Hannah and Lane win first high individual in their division.

This is a very practical contest and one that will be useful and beneficial for years to come for the individuals that participate. Many of the lifeskills that are needed by the students as they prepare for their future are achieved thru the 4-H projects and activities, such as leadership, responsibility, communications, team work etc.

Hannah has the opportunity to compete with her recipe in the National Poultry BBQ Contest in November held in Louisville, KY. The team is already discussing what to work on next year. Cannon County is honored to have a state 4-H winning team! It is a great accomplishment taking into account the commitment from the staff and past agents for this competition.

Secretary Kim Smithson has contributed to the creativity of the display and current and past agent Heath Nokes, Sarah Malone and program assistant Jessica Johnson laid the framework for the success of this team, according to County Director Bruce Steelman. We are so proud of the success and great attitudes this team has exhibited throughout the practice and competition at the Regional and State level. We look forward to a possible repeat from the team next year with the exception of Paul Steelman which has ended his 4-H career with this contest. But what a way to have closure as a 4-H member. If you would like more information about the 4-H program, contact Sarah Malone, Youth Development Extension Agent, at snmalone@utk.edu or 615-563-2554.

Post 279 honors our outstanding First Responders and county employees

By Colonel Jim Stone

During the October County Commissioners meeting on Saturday, October 18th, Legionnaire Penny Daniels led the group in the Pledge of Allegiance. Commander Charlie Harrell presented Certificates Of Meritorious Service and trophies to Ed Brown, Sheriff's Department; Micheal George, Fire Department; Roger Lovvorn, Ambulance Service; Skylar Daniel, Rescue Squad; and Daryl Fisher, County Maintenance Department. Legionnaire Jim Stone read the Citations for the Outstanding Awards and Trophies.

It is a great honor for the Hilton Stone American Legion Post 279 in Woodbury to pay tribute to our outstanding First Responders and employees of Cannon County. When you have a fire, a robbery, a heart attack, or need help, these are the young men and women that you can depend on to make things right. These men and women, just like our military men and women who signed a blank check payable to the United States of America, have signed a blank check to the citizens of Cannon County in the amount of up to their lives, if that situation ever arises.

God bless these young men and women, our men and women serving in our military forces, the Citizens of Cannon County, and the United States of America.

SPORTS

Girls XC state bound

After consecutive near misses entire team advances

TONY STINNETT
Courier Sports Editor

Three current Cannon County Cross Country runners have reached the state tournament in each of the last three years but after a series of near misses the entire team will enjoy the state tournament experience this year.

Cannon County's girls finished third overall at the Region 4-A/AA Tournament to earn one of three berths into the TSSAA Class A/AA State Tournament Saturday at Steeplechase in Nashville.

It was a satisfying experience after the team had fallen just short of advancing in each of the previous two seasons.

Senior Hannah Faulkner was the first Lionette to reach the state tournament when she accomplished the feat in the first year of the program's existence in 2011.

Elva Magana followed as an individual in 2012 and returned along with freshman Hannah Whited in 2013.

"It is always great when you have players at the state tournament," Cannon County Head Coach Marc Larson said. "The goal for this group of young ladies was to advance to state as a team. We knew we had some individuals capable of advancing but the young ladies worked hard to make sure they went as a team. They accomplished that goal."

Signal Mountain won the event with 29 points, followed by Central Magnet with 49. Cannon County was third with 84. The top three finishers advance to state.

Hannah Whited continued to dominate cross-country circles with another strong effort. Whited finished third overall out of 90 runners with a time of 20:22.22 in the 5,000-meter run.

Erin McReynolds has enjoyed a strong season and turned in a Top 10 finish, crossing the finish line in 10th place with a time of 21:02.84.

Magana was 22nd with a 23:14.31 and Faulkner was nipping at her heels with a 23:16.65, good enough for 23rd as the Lionettes had four runners in the Top 25.

"We have been pretty consistent most of the season," Larson said. "In most tournaments we have had finishers in the top third of the race and that's key, especially in our region."

Kristen Hale narrowly missed placing five in the Top 25. Hale was 26th with a time of 24:35.46. Teammate Sarah Hickman has been consistent all season and turned in another solid showing with a 29th-place finish with a time of 25:45.34. Alayna Reed was 40th with a time of 27:07.07.

Burdick, McReynolds punch tickets to state

TONY STINNETT
Courier Sports Editor

Cannon County standout Marshall McReynolds is headed back to the state tournament.

Teammate Jake Burdick will join him there as a first-time competitor in the event after each turned in Top 10 finishes at the Region 4-A/AA meet Thursday (Oct. 23) to earn spots as individuals in the TSSAA Class A/AA State Tourney Saturday in Nashville.

Cannon County's boys team finished fifth overall. The top three teams advance to the state tournament. The Lions were just 14 points from advancing as a team.

Central Magnet won the meet with 62 points, followed by Chattanooga Christian (64), Merrol Hyde (78), Signal Mountain (86) and Cannon County (92).

To give an idea of the level of difficulty in Region 4-A/AA, Cannon County's score would have been good for third in the Region 3-AAA event.

"It's a tough, tough region," Cannon County Head Coach Marc Larson said. "That makes for good competition. Our young men had a strong showing. I'm proud of their effort and especially proud of (McReynolds and Burdick) for getting to state."

McReynolds finished second overall with a time of 17:17.46 in the 5,000-meter event. Burdick was ninth with a time of 18:24.60.

Cannon County had five runners finish in the top 30 out of 90 runners.

That consistency enabled the Lions to enjoy a strong campaign in 2014 as the veteran unit's leadership proved crucial for a team with several youngsters in the starting lineup. Devin Gilpatrick, Corey Seymour and Austin Duggin have counted in the team's scoring all season. Gilpatrick is a sophomore and Duggin and Seymour are freshmen.

Gilpatrick was 22nd with a time of 18:50.34, followed by Seymour in 29th with a time of 19:29.54.

Duggin was 30th overall with a time of 19:30.47. Tristan Morten was 42nd and Sam Sissom was 44th.

Cannon also participated in the junior varsity meet.

John Frazier led the Lions with a 17th place finish, followed by Reece Wisdom (49th, 22:19.71), Tyler Bailey (51st, 22:41.26), Aaron Smith (55th, 23:05.72), Jacob Bentley (57th, 23:16.85), Caleb Sissom (66th, 26:28.49) and Michael Higdon (69th, 27:42.46). Laura Nichols participated in the girls meet.

Cannon County seniors Jake Burdick, left, and Marshall McReynolds advanced to the TSSAA Class A/AA Boys State Tournament as individuals with Top 10 finishes at the Region 4 A/AA meet Thursday (Oct. 23). McReynolds finished second overall and Burdick finished ninth.

Lions fail to put together consecutive wins

JAMESTOWN - Cannon County was riding a wave of momentum as it traveled to Jamestown to face York coming off of an upset victory of Smith County the previous week.

Heck, there was even talk of possible playoff scenerios if the Lions could win there last three and get a little help.

Those hopes were quickly dashed as York secured a 49-7 win against Cannon County (1-8, 1-4) Friday (Oct. 24). The Dragons have won four straight and used a bruising ground attack to control the game and the Lions.

York piled up 281 yards rushing and added another 119 through the air. It was the most rushing yards and total yards allowed by the Lions' defense this season.

Cannon County's defense had four takeaways. Jake Walkup had an interception. A.J. Daniel had another sterling defensive effort with a game-high 14 tackles, one forced fumble and one fumble recovery. Junior linebacker Eldon Resko continued to be a bright spot in the middle of the Cannon County defense. Resko had 13 tackles. Senior Case Isenhardt turned in another stellar effort with 11 tackles, one forced fumble and one sack. Ethan Smith contributed eight tackles and also had a fumble recovery.

But the offense couldn't do anything with those takeaways.

The Lions had just 65 yards passing. Quarterback Josh Walkup was 4-of-23 for 65 yards. He threw three interceptions.

Walkup did hook up with Daniel for Cannon County's only score on a 36-yard touchdown pass that tied the game 7-7 in the first quarter.

It was all downhill from there for Cannon County.

The game turned just before halftime. Trailing 21-7, Cannon County took possession with 46 seconds remaining. Not only did the Lions not run out the clock, but they gave up a 58-yard punt return to send the Dragons into halftime with a 28-7 lead.

Fire Marshal's office offers Halloween tips

Fall is in the air, pumpkins are on porches, and massive amounts of candy are calling! Halloween is just around the corner, and your local and state fire officials want to make sure safety is kept in mind while celebrating this popular October holiday.

"Halloween is an exciting time, especially for kids, but precautions need to be taken to make sure that fun does not lead to fire danger," said State Fire Marshal Gary West.

One of the major culprits for holiday fires is candles. Halloween, according to the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), is one of the top five calendar days for candle fires. NFPA statistics show that decorations are the item first ignited in more than 1,000 reported home fires each year. The Volunteer State has not been immune to the dangers unattended candles can cause; from 2009-2013, Tennessee fire departments responded to 464 structure fires that were started by candles. These fires resulted in 9 deaths, 28 injuries and $10.38 million in direct property damage.

"Using battery-operated candles to illuminate your Halloween pumpkins is a great alternative to candles," said West. "They can keep your celebrations festive, while also making them safer."

It is also important to stress fire safety in regard to haunted houses that may be operating in your area. Visit the Codes Enforcement section of the State Fire Marshal's website to learn more about the safety requirements for haunted houses operating in Tennessee (<http://commerce.tn.gov/sfm/fpcsect.shtml>).

Follow these important tips to ensure your Halloween is fire-safe:

When choosing a costume, stay away from billowing or long, trailing fabric. If you are making your own costume, choose material that won't easily ignite if it comes into contact with heat or flame. If your children wear masks, make sure eye holes are large enough to allow unobstructed views.

Dried flowers, cornstalks and crepe paper are highly flammable. Keep these and other decorations well away from all open flames and heat sources, including light bulbs and heaters.

It is safest to use a flashlight or battery-operated candles in a jack-o-lantern. If you use a flame candle, use extreme caution and keep them well attended at all times. When lighting candles inside jack-o-lanterns, use long fireplace matches or a long-nozzle candle lighter. Be sure to place lit pumpkins well away from anything that can burn and far enough out of the way of trick-or-treaters and such high-traffic areas as doorsteps, walkways and yards.

Remember to keep exits clear of decorations, so nothing blocks escape routes.

Tell children to stay away from open flames. Be sure they know how to stop, drop and roll if their clothing catches fire. (Have them practice stopping immediately, dropping to the ground, covering their faces with their hands, and rolling over and over.)

Use flashlights or other battery-operated lights as alternatives to candles or torch lights when decorating walkways and yards. They are much safer for trick-or-treaters, whose costumes may brush against the lighting.

When attending a Halloween party, look for ways out of the home/venue and plan how you would get out in an emergency.

If you have a Halloween party, check for cigarettes under furniture cushions and in areas where people might have smoked, before you go to bed.

BY ANNA PATRICK

Although he lived to be 91, we are never ready to give him up. Our hearts go out to his wife, Sara, and children, Donna Gaither Nichols and Douglas Gaither as well as many other family members, loving neighbors and friends on the passing of Winfred, "Fred", "Wimp" Gaither. He will be greatly missed by this community.

Two names were inadvertently left off of last week's list of Perfect Attendance: Jordan Vantrease and Shannen Kelly.

It was a beautiful day to attend the Bell Buckle Craft Fair. DeAnna Reed, Janna Womack and I got our early start as usual. I had to leave not long after getting there due to getting P-pa to the ER for another infection. The other two girls ventured back but spent 2 hours in traffic!! Now I know why we go early every year!

Kullon Patrick has been spending a lot of time around here. He's been down this week at "Auntie DD's" playing with Titan, "Mim's" Halloween Snoopy décor as well as Alayna and Adrianna Reed. Tuesday it was a day with William and Grant Buterbaugh in Liberty. He is being spoiled while baby sister, Shiloh, is getting her spoiling at home with mom.

Sunday night Robbie Owen, Betty and Terry Thomas, Brad Leach, Stefanie, Samantha and Madison Gaither were at Elizabeth's Chapel to witness the baptism of Samantha and Madison.

Tuesday night was probably the last night eating on "the porch" as we so fondly call it. Robbie Owen, Betty and Terry Thomas, and P-pa and I had to put on coats to enjoy this but we DID IT! This has been a summer "tradition" for us with Ruth and Marvin Davenport.

Wednesday it was off to Panama Beach, FL for Betty and Terry, Bobby and Brenda Francis, Joyce Leach, Ronnie and Becky Gandy, Brad Leach, Stefanie, and Samantha and Madison Gaither. The trip is special as Brad and Stefanie will say (or said) their I'do's in a Friday afternoon beach wedding.

Thursday it was off to Walter Hill for Janna Womack and me to get hugs and kisses from Kullon and Little Sis, Shiloh. It was a checkup for Shiloh and some flu mist for Kullon and some help for mom, Shannon. A meal at Zaxby's topped off the trip.

It's a short birthday list this week. Joyce Coe's birthday is the 29th and Debbie Cheatham and Halleen Tate end our month of wishes on Halloween. Opening up November is Ruth Davenport who hits the big 8-0, Helen Pruitt's is the 2nd.

No anniversaries for this week so Happy and safe Halloween to all of you.

News from the Mountain

BY CAROL GUNTER

Good morning to all of you this Monday morning and I hope you are all doing okay and that you got to attend church on Sunday to worship and praise the Lord. Do not know what I would do if I didn't have Jesus guiding my footsteps.

Spent a little time after church Sunday at Glenda's store (Dekalb Market) and got to talk with Jackie (our Yankee) as Aubrey called her. Certainly had been a while since I had seen her. A hug, of course, is always welcomed and the conversation with her divine. She works a different shift than Deb and Spider so I've got to keep in touch with her.

Wayne Gunter and I having a delightful chit-chat for a few minutes on Saturday. He and his family all doing okay. Also, got to talk with Betty Gunter and she and her family are doing well. Naturally we had to talk about her kitty cats Miss Kitty and Misty. She simply adores her cats. They are so much company to her and doesn't everyone consider their pets family?

Saturday I thought I was going to have to send out a spider alert for George my garden spider as he was M.I.A. He wasn't in his web all day Friday and I just assumed the worst had happened to him. Around noon on Saturday there he was back in his web. Sure was happy he was back as I had got used to him just hanging around. Cannot find out anything from him or about his whereabouts for that day and a half, as he's not talking. I'm just glad he's back.

Received a call from Dorothy Hobbs, or Dot, on Sunday evening. Had been a spell since I've talked to her. We just picked up I guess you would say where we last left off. We both enjoy the show "In the Heat of the Night" and talked about it and its characters that are so interesting on the show. Compared with other shows on TV today, this one's a winner by far for us.

Neighbor Lynn Underwood came down for a few minutes on Sunday evening. Also, neighbor Ashley Richardson stopped in for a few minutes.

Over the years some really fun moments went on in Aubrey's shop. I found out about them usually later on. One night a cat had a tin can tied to its tail. Can't think of who would do that can you? You can only imagine the shine that cat had over that as it was running around the shop over cat had under probably a dozer or a truck tied to get away from the can. Aubrey said he knew the cat couldn't get under the doors to get out because the openings way too small, or so he thought, but I guess the cat was sort of like Wendy Bagwell in the song about those rattlesnakes and was going to get out of there one way or the other as he made a daring dash under one of the doors with the can still attached to his tail and he could be heard in the distance still running in those gravels with that can still clanging away. Another time which was I imagine the funniest was when duct tape was put on a cat's paws. I guess you could say the cat was dancing up a storm as it was trying to get the tape off its paws. A lot of laughter going on at the expense of the cats, but the can and the tape were removed and didn't stay on them too long. The cats were petted so much they were about rotten and gluttons for all this mischief by Aubrey and would always come back for more. After Aubrey would tell me about what they did to the cats, I would say surely you didn't do that Aubrey to which he would look at me and, of course, give me that grin.

Food delivered to my patio door last night by my good neighbors tat are looking out for me. Had already had supper but could not resist the smell of that good food as I just had to dig in. Quite miserable after making a pig out of myself. Sure glad the Tums were in the cabinet.

Talked a while with Mai Nell Melton Monday night. Carlton still not feeling well. Do keep him in prayer. Others we need to remember in prayer: Denise Stanton, Jeff Brown, Bobby Taylor, Edith Miller, Donna Lawson, the Kenny Rhody family, and Chloe Evelyn Bogle.

Read with a lot of interest Courier Editor Mike West's take on some of the scary tales about our Short Mountain in the October 22nd edition of the Courier. Talking about that devil's hole that is on my side of the mountain that I have never visited and probably never will even though it is just down the road from where I live. Stories over the years abounding about that devil's hole. The one that sticks in my mind was that horses and a wagon were lost in that devil's hole. So many different versions people would tell about it. If there was a chance I might have fallen in there, well, that was the very reason I didn't show up there. I did not know that Mr. Urby Dania was Mike's cousin. I respected Mr. Urby just like everyone else did. He was quite an intelligent man. Gosh, talking about Mrs. Mag Purser just about brought tears to my eyes as I loved that woman so much as she lived in a house that once stood across from my homeplace. That was the same house that Mr. Paul Murphy, his wife, and son perished in from a fire twenty some odd years ago. Loved to be around Aunt Mag as we called her. She had a good disposition and a very jovial person she was. Listening to her made my day - stole away every chance I could to be in her presence.
